OF SHERIFF IN NEW YORK CITY

Decision as Challenge

FARLEY WON'T TALK

Failure to Explain "Little Tin Box" Leads to Ouster

Albany, N. Y. —(AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic governor of New York, today removed from office Sheriff Thomas M. Farley, district leader of Tammany Hall's Keystone unit, in New York city.

The governor said he was not satisfied with Farley's explanation of his income and that he was mainly on this ground that he removed him. The income, as charged by Samuel Seabury, counsel to the legislative committee investigating the city's administration, related primarily to Farley's "wonderful tin box" in which the sheriff deposited $390,000 over a period of a few years.

See Challenge

The removal of the Tammany Hall man was construed by some to mean that Mr. Roosevelt had thrown down a gauntlet to Tammany challenging it to oppose his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination at next June's national convention. Others, however, believed that the governor's action had no political significance and that his dismissal of Farley was an action entirely against the sheriff and had no connection with his feelings toward Tammany Hall.

The hall had been expected by some political observers to retaliate for the removal by throwing its strength to some anti-Roosevelt unit.

Farley, on his part, said he would give his support to Roosevelt's candidacy regardless of what action the governor might take in his case—this the Tammany hall organization itself turned its convention support to Roosevelt.

Although he did not base his removal order on Farley's personal appropriation of interest on funds of litigants, the governor criticized this "highly improper practice" which had been "long continued."

Seigfried F. Hartman, the sheriff's attorney, would make no statement when he heard the news.

"I may have a statement when I read the opinion," he said.

Samuel Seabury, chief counsel of the legislative committee, placed before Governor Roosevelt a statement in which the sheriff was dismissed as so indicated he would issue a statement as soon as he had been informed of the text of the decision.

New York —(AP)—Thomas M. Farley remained in the seclusion of a hospital today and refused to make any statement on the governor's decision to oust him as sheriff of New York city.

The sheriff made known that he would make no statement a few minutes before the decision was announced. Through a nurse, he referred callers to his attorney.

Neither Mayor Walker nor John F. Curry, leader of Tammany hall would comment on Farley's removal.

11-YEAR-OLD BOY
RESCUES PARENTS

Logansville —(AP)—Harold Meyer today was an 11-year-old hero, credited with saving the lives of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Meyer, from the savage attacks of an enraged bull.

Harold's father who had entered the barn on his farm near here, was suddenly knocked to the ground by the bull. Mrs. Meyer rushed to aid her husband and the animal turned his attack upon the woman.

As the bull was charging his mother for the second time, Harold returned from the farmhouse where he had rushed for a shot gun and killed the animal with two shots from the weapon.

EDITOR CAN'T RAISE
$1,000 BOND, IN JAIL

Oshkosh —(AP)—If friends of Roland Nicholas Senn, editor of the Square Dealer, are unable to raise $1,000 bail for the editor soon, the next edition of the paper will carry on the masthead the line "edited at the county jail."

Senn, arraigned on a criminal libel charge brought by M. Genal, a trucking contractor, was sent to jail yesterday when he failed to raise the bond.

"If my friends are unable to raise the money," the editor said, "I will sit and drink and am a prisoner from now on." His preliminary hearing is scheduled Friday.

WETS DEFEATED
IN VOTE EFFORT

Dry Blocks Attempt to Secure Roll Call on Prohibition Issue

Washington —(AP)—The hazards of parliamentary procedure have handicapped the house wet bloc an unexpected defeat in their effort to secure a roll call vote on a prohibition issue.

They brought to a test late yesterday the question of spending federal money for wire tapping in prohibition enforcement, losing, by a teller vote of 132 to 102, a motion to amend the appropriation bill in question by closing the $11,359,500 prohibition bureau funds to wire tapping uses. This was the expected result.

Upon it they planned to offer a motion to send the bill back to committee with instructions to insert the anti-wire-tapping item. Such motion permits a roll call, and only one recomittal motion may be submitted on each such bill. Before Representative Schafer (R., Wis.), could be recognized to put the proposition, Speaker Garner gave the floor to Representative Cannon (D., Mo.), who moved recomittal on another point.

The speaker explained, at Schafer's protest, that house procedure required him to recognize Cannon first as he is a member of the appropriations committee in charge of the bill. Later Garner told inquiring newspapermen he had not known Cannon was going to seek recomittal. His motion had been defeated 132 to 1, but Schafer objecting that a quorum was not present, the house adjourned and a roll call will be held on the question tomorrow.

Now the wet bloc must seek another prohibition issue to get the names of the members down in black and white on the question.

The situation involved one gain to them. The teller vote recorded 25 more for the amendment than it obtained when presented a year ago on the 1932 appropriation bill.

SAYS U. S. MUST BE READY TO AVERT WAR

Madison —(AP)—America is as near war today as it was in 1914 and to avert it we must show the world that we are ready to do the job, Col. Roy F. Farrant, president of St. John's Military academy at Delaware, said last night at the Washington birthday party of the Madison American Legion post.

Gov. Murray said he would have nothing to do with the prohibition question.

Gov. Murray came here from Indianapolis, where he spoke yesterday afternoon before the district meeting of Rotary clubs.

Solons Face
Poor Relief
Issue Again

Washington —(AP)—In the midst of difficulties over complicated legislation, congress today was again confronted with the controversial issue of relief for the unemployed.

This question was brought to the fore by committee action in both houses while the senate was debating legislation to curb the use of injunctions in labor disputes and the house was considering miscellaneous bills.

The house roads committee approved a bill to distribute $120,000 to the states for road construction and the senate manufacturers committee favored a measure to appropriate $375,000,000 for direct federal aid and the same amount for road construction.

Already, the senate has rejected a similar bill sponsored by Senators LaFollette (R., Wis.) and Costigan (D., Colo.) this one, by Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.) differs from the other in that it provides for repayment, by the states of the relief appropriation.

Another relief measure—to authorize the use of 5,000,000 bushels of farm board wheat for humans and livestock in the northwest—was approved by the senate agriculture committee.

Meanwhile, the house received from its appropriations committee the supply bill providing funds for the treasury and postoffice departments for the next fiscal year. It carries $1,059,898,000 to operate the two departments and $1,161,887,000 for public debt retirement.

Richard S. Whitney, president of the New York stock exchange, defended the practice of short selling before a house judiciary subcommittee. He said it was necessary and useful and added without it the New York exchange would have closed months ago.

A 20 per cent cut in the $12,000 salary of members of the farm board was approved by the senate civil service committee in reporting favorably a bill by Senator Borah (R., Idaho).

MURRAY SEES U. S.
AT WAR WITH JAPAN

Predicts Present Policy in Far East Will Embroil America in Fight

Monticello, Ind. —(AP)—War with Japan within a year as the result of the United States' foreign policy, was the prediction with which Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma opened his campaign for the Democratic nomination for president here last night.

Attacking the government's attitude as "pro-China and anti-Japanese," the Oklahoma said the United States "should use every effort to preserve international peace and not be pro-anything, but pro-American."

In an interview, Gov. Murray said he had spurned an offer of the vice-presidency if he would support another candidate for the presidential nomination. He also told newspapermen he "will never go on the ticket with Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Following his address the governor went to Marion, Ind., where another speech was scheduled this afternoon. He will speak at Gary tonight.

The "Alfalfa Bill" of Oklahoma said the farmers and small manufacturers had been stripped of the privilege of credit.

He charged gigantic mergers had done much to bring unemployment and urged that the whole effort of government be directed toward the "little man."

Gov. Murray said he would have nothing to do with the prohibition question.

Gov. Murray came here from Indianapolis, where he spoke yesterday afternoon before the district meeting of Rotary clubs.

OLDFIELD PLANS TO TRY FOR SPEED RECORD

Daytona Beach, Fla. —(AP)—Barney Oldfield, who had his heyday back in the time when automobile drivers were big as buckets and the horse still was in good standing, plans to take to the roaring road again hoping to win back the land speed record for the United States.

The dean of American race car drivers divulged his plans today while here to witness Sir Malcolm Campbell's scheduled attempt to break the record of 245 miles an hour that the Englishman already holds.

Oldfield, who is planning a car that will surpass any record Campbell might establish here with his big Bluebird racing machine. He hopes to have the car in readiness for trials in February, 1933.

Secretary Mills Says Taxes Must Be Raised to Balance Budget

Washington —(AP)—Many millions of dollars carefully culled from next year's operating costs of the huge treasury and post office departments are more than over-balanced by additional public debt requirements and the federal building program, in the annual supply bill reported today to the house.

In the biggest regular appropriation measure, $1,059,898,000 has been set aside to operate the two departments, and $1,161,887,000 for public debt retirement, interest and other permanent outlays. These sums total nearly half the $4,600,000,000 budget submitted by President Hoover.

The appropriations committee cut $22,677,000 off the budget estimates for the operating expense bill, reducing this $44,688,000 below current expenses. The post office department received $805,586,000, or $7,297,000 less than the budget and $37,000,000 less than this year. The treasury was allowed $254,311,000 or $14,704,000 less than the budget and $7,391,000, below current outlays. The Democratic economy knife pared a net 2 per cent savings from the direct appropriation measure.

An increase of $118,666,000 for the permanent outlays was caused largely by increases to $426,489,000 in the sinking fund to retire the public debt, and to $640,000,000 in interest, and by $69,000,000 charged off on cash repayments by foreign governments.

Secretary Mills explained to the committee this was "due to an increase in the amount of the public debt outstanding" resulting from the issuance of bonds to meet the treasury's deficit." Mills said the surplus $2,400,000,000 paid into the sinking fund since the world war above legal requirements had been about counterbalanced by a $3,000,000,000 increase in the public debt.

Must Cut Expenses

"You have drawn on your reserve fund, and when we approach the fiscal year 1933 there are only two things to do, and to do just as vigorously as we know how," he told the committee. "Cut expenditures to the bone and raise taxes until the American people and the rest of the world can be assured that during the fiscal year 1933 current revenues will balance current expenditures, and that while we cannot reduce our public debt in 1933 through the operations of the sinking fund, under no circumstances will the public debt be increased after June 30, 1933."

Mills recommended the abolition of bureaus to further economize in government expenditures, saying "there are some that could disappear without doing any harm to the government."

Following his course laid down by Chairman Byrns, the Democratic committee slashed many items, but

Japanese Again Impose
Strict News Censorship

Tokyo —(AP)—For the second time this month official secrecy has closed over important military developments in Japan, and an active censorship has kept out of the news papers information concerning preparations for increasing the expeditionary force to Shanghai.

This was by order of the cabinet the ministry apparently believing that control of the news might disguise the serious view which the government takes of the situation in Shanghai.

A few early editions of yesterday's evening newspapers managed to print a brief report of the cabinet's decision to send more men to China, but that was the only information most of the people have had.

Official supervision of dispatches by foreign correspondents has taken some odd forms. For example, a keen-eyed supervisor deleted part of an interview given to the Associated Press by Sadao Araki, the minister of war and one of the strongest and most responsible members of the cabinet.

Says Short Selling Has Kept Stock Market Open

Washington —(AP)—Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, told a house judiciary subcommittee today that "if there was no short selling, I am confident our market would have closed months ago."

He said that short selling is a "necessary and useful practice."

Whitney opened his testimony with a general discussion of the mechanics of stock exchange transactions. The judiciary group is considering bills both to regulate and prohibit short selling.

Whitney said he could "not see why it is wrong" for a short seller to borrow stock "if the borrowing of money is permitted."

"Short sales are executed in the same manner as other sales," he said.

"The compensation short sellers pay for loans is sufficient to secure lenders."

"It is an outstanding achievement that our market has stayed open," Whitney continued.

"If there was no short selling I am confident our market would have closed months ago. The securities market would have followed the same course the real estate market did after the break and the consequences would have been disastrous."

"Because the exchange has stayed open, the huge total of loans based on securities in this country has remained liquid. Had they become illiquid our entire banking system would have been devastatingly affected."

Whitney said announcement of the ban for two days when England went off the gold standard.

"We felt the only alternative was closing the exchange," he said.

"We stopped short selling because we were aware of the existence of a short interest of 4,000,000 shares."

"There was no doubt that a temporary ban on short selling would bring buying power into the market. The subsequent events proved the governing board was right."

176 Vessels
Are Running
Rum To U. S.

Washington —(AP)—The coast guard estimates that "large, highly organized international combines" are operating 176 liquor-smuggling vessels along United States coasts.

Rear Admiral F. C. Billard, commander, so testified before the house appropriations committee in hearings on the treasury department supply bill reported today to the house.

"These vessels, Billard estimated, are landing the same amount of alcoholic liquors that 163 ships did last year. He added:

"It is perfectly apparent that if we had a sufficient number of coast guard craft to keep all the smuggling vessels under constant surveillance, we would have the situation entirely controlled. . . . We really would have to have more than ship for ship because we, of course, have to find the liquor vessels and then to keep the vessels under surveillance and our ships would have to be relieved."

Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol told the same committee he believed the illegal diversion of industrial alcohol is decreasing. He added:

"I think that the diversion of industrial alcohol is quite small. . . . I undertake to say that at no time will it be possible to so control the products made from denatured alcohol that there will be no diversion. It is chemically possible. Whether it is practicable depends entirely on whether the process costs more than the illicit traffic returns. So our aim is changing these formulas from time to time. . . . It is impossible to use this industrial alcohol as a source of illegal spirits."

Billard testified that Canadian legislation has materially reduced liquor smuggling on the great lakes. He continued:

"Smuggling is now carried on almost exclusively by large, highly organized international combines. . . . Our information indicates that there are at present time 91 foreign liquor vessels engaged in the business of attempting to smuggle liquor on the Atlantic coast."

"The vessels, hailing principally from Nova Scotia and New Foundland, have as bases of operations the island of St. Pierre, Miquelon, the Bahamas and other islands of the West Indies."

"In the Gulf there are 47 foreign vessels engaged in smuggling, operating along the entire Gulf coast from Florida to Texas, and basing their operations principally on the port of Belize, British Honduras."

"On the Pacific coast there are 33 foreign vessels engaged in smuggling, basing their operations on mother ships anchored off the Mexican coast."

JAPS REPULSED
AT KIANGWAN

Await Reinforcements; Warn Neutral Vessels Not to Anchor in Whangpoo

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Japan's army at Shanghai, repulsed in successive attacks on Kiangwan, shifted the action back to Chapei today and appeared to be marking time until a larger expeditionary force would arrive.

The Chinese were not idle, however, and Shanghai's mayor warned neutral authorities that it would be dangerous to anchor vessels in the Whangpoo river near the Hongkew area where a Japanese force is concentrated.

His warning was by way of renewed protest against the use of the international settlement as a military base, but it was interpreted as an indication that the Chinese were preparing to bombard Hongkew.

Bombing planes, which have been active for the past two days, were over the Chapei front, blasting away at the Chinese trenches, and there was an artillery barrage to protect an infantry attack which failed.

There were reports that Japanese reinforcements already had arrived at Woosung, but if they had there was no sign of them by mid-afternoon. The authorities at Tokyo imposed a censorship on all news concerning troop movements.

General Tang Ting-Kai, the Chinese commander in chief, received a group of foreign correspondents to whom he deplored what he described as willful Japanese attacks on defenseless Chinese civilians. He reaffirmed his previous assertion that even though the Japanese army may eventually win, it will have to fight until the last Chinese bullet is fired.

Japanese casualties in the fighting here during the last three days were given by Japanese military headquarters as 500. The headquarters officials declined to say what portion of that number were killed.

DISAGREEMENT STILL BLOCKS CREDIT BILL

Washington —(AP)—Disagreement today still blocked final enactment of the federal reserve credit expansion bill, but an early solution in the house-senate conference committee was expected.

New light on the country's banking situation was given by the latest monthly report of the federal reserve board, showing member bank credit declined $550,000,000 during January in leading cities, this downward movement following upon a billion and a half decrease in loans and investments during the quarter immediately preceding.

This was taken by some in congress to bolster the argument made there that bankers generally, far from needing expanded credit facilities, were not using fully those now available to them.

Conclusion yesterday of hearings on the home loan discount proposal, —it is a part of the administration reconstruction program—left banking committee leaders determined to push the legislation, but doubtful that it would be enacted. Very stubborn opposition has shown itself.

Stimson Blames Present Situation on Non-observance of Treaties

OUTLINES POLICY

Note Fails to Place Blame for Situation in Far East

Washington —(AP)—In a sweeping reaffirmation of American policy, Secretary Stimson declared today that the whole fabric of international understanding in the far east—including even the balance of naval power agreed on in 1921-22—was threatened by the hostilities between Japan and China.

It was partly because of the guarantees in the now-disregarded nine power treaty, he said, that the United States agreed to give up some of its battleships and abandon further fortifications at Guam and the Philippines.

The secretary indulged in no predictions, but his mention of the naval ratio attracted wide notice especially at the capitol, coming as it did on the heels of action by the senate naval committee for authorization of a bigger navy.

Standing firmly as he has in the past on the doctrine of an "open door" in China and challenging Japan's position for revision of the nine power act, Secretary Stimson, defined this government's policy in a detailed open letter to Senators.

See Future Stand

The communication was taken as once to represent the stand that will be taken when the time comes for winding up the Sino-Japanese dispute.

In effect, the communication—while not addressed to Japan—has been the practice with similar statements of the past few months—put that country on notice that she is in China in violation of treaties and this government is not going to recognize any settlements growing out of her action.

In one high quarter, it was regarded as aimed to mobilize public opinion behind the treaties governing relations in the Orient.

The letter was addressed to Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee. He declined to comment on it today, but had it inserted in the congressional record.

Soon after the senate met, it waived its rules to send to the white house the confirmation of Joseph C. Grew as ambassador to Japan. He succeeds W. Cameron Forbes.

The action was taken on motion of Borah, who brought up the matter for action so that Grew might receive his commission without delay. The Grew nomination was confirmed last week.

Make Treaty

The nine power treaty, Stimson wrote, was entered into by Japan and the other signatories at a time when China was engaged in an attempt to develop free institutions and the powers realized China would require many years to attain that end.

"The treaty was thus a covenant of self denial among the signatories in deliberate renunciation of any policy of aggression which might tend to interfere with that development of the 'open door' policy reveals that faith—that only by such a process, under the protection of such an agreement, could the full interest not only of China, but of all nations which have intercourse with her best be served."

The secretary reminded that "on Jan. 7 last, upon the instruction of the president, this government formally notified Japan and China that it would not recognize any situation, treaty or agreement entered into by those governments in violation of the covenants of these treaties (the nine power and the Kellogg-Briand treaties) which affected the rights of our government or its citizens in China."

Foretell Action

"If a similar decision should be reached and a similar position taken by the other governments of the world," he continued, "a caveat will be placed upon such action which, we believe, will effectively bar the legality hereafter of any title or right sought to be maintained by pressure or treaty violation, and which has been shown by history in the past, will eventually lead to the restoration to China of rights and titles of which she may have been deprived."

Stimson said recent events in China and especially the hostilities begun in Manchuria and extended to Shanghai, far from indicating the importance of the faithful observance of the covenants.

He avoided any attempt to place his finger on the sore spot of blame.

Says Japan Plans To Send 60,000 More Troops To Battle Front

CHINESE ARMY HEAD PREDICTS LONG ENCOUNTER

General Tsai Ting-Kai Raps Japanese Killing of Civilians

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS
Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press
Shanghai—(AP)—General Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the Chinese route army which is defending Shanghai, told a group of 40 newspaper correspondents at his headquarters at Chenju today that the Japanese were sending 60,000 additional troops to reinforce General Uyeda's army here.
(This would bring the total Japanese force at Shanghai to upwards of 125,000 men.) He said China's army was able to resist the Japanese attack for "a long time to come" and the appearance of the Chinese soldiers in their almost bomb proof maze of trenches stretching for miles gave some indication that his estimate might be correct.
"Tell the world this truth," he said to the newspapermen who were invited to his headquarters to be guests at a "tea" conference: "My army could force the Japanese out of Chinese territory quickly but we are not taking the offensive because we want peace and we want to preserve the neutrality of the international settlement."
"The Japanese may win after a long fight," he said, "but we will be winners in principle. We will resist to the last bullet and to the last minute."
General Tsai received his guests at the converted villa which is serving as the seat of the Chinese military operations. While the correspondents gathered about the wood stove in the room which had once been the villa's parlor, the young spot-commander apologized because he actually had time to offer. The correspondents' first questions were inquiries regarding where the entrance to the general's bombproof cellar might be reached. He gave this information and then launched into a sharp discussion of Japanese military methods.
"Unfortunately," he said, "this is not a war of army against army. The Japanese have chosen to attack women and children too. The cruel and inhuman acts of the Japanese in dropping bombs on helpless civilians are a violation of the principles of international warfare. Their bombs killed few soldiers but since the attack began four days ago 5,500 civilians have been killed or wounded.
"Civilians unprotected
"The soldiers have trenches and dugouts, but the civilians have been unable to escape the bombs, shells and bullets.
"The life or death of the Chinese republic depends upon the battle we are putting up. The Japanese may drive us back but we will resist to the limit of our strength. We will not take the offensive because we are not fighting a bloody war and we do not want to violate the international settlement."
He attacked the issuance by the Japanese commander, Lieutenant General Kenkichi Uyeda, of the ultimatum at Shanghai. "General Uyeda may be a good soldier," he said, "but he doesn't know military principles. There is no such thing as one general presenting an ultimatum to another such things are done through governments."
General Tsai then led his guests into a tramped garden where he joined them in refreshments, posed for pictures and answered a barrage of questions. On the way back to Shanghai the newspapermen were given an opportunity to inspect a portion of the intricate system of trenches which interlaces the countryside for miles behind the front line.
The soldiers appeared well-fed and well-equipped as well as remarkably cheerful. The deep, winding trenches and dugouts, with earthen roofs, offer excellent protection from bombs and artillery fire. Barrier after barrier of barbed wire is calculated to further impede Japanese progress.
Many of the soldiers appeared to be not more than 14 years old.
Many women were busy in the fields between the trench lines preparing them for crops.

BRADFORD HITS AT DESTRUCTION OF WOODS, GAME

Nation Was Built at Cost of Waste of Natural Resources, He Says

The reckless destruction of America's forests, fish, game, natural deposits, and soil was discussed by Alfred S. Bradford in a talk on local conservation work at the meeting of Rotary club at Hotel Northern Tuesday noon. Mr. Bradford told of the work and plans of the Outagamie County Fish and Game association, which is now 30 years old, and has 300 members.
Painting a picture of extensive forests that once extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, so many that one could walk on the tops of trees for 2,000 miles, the speaker decried the exploiting that had been unchecked until 20 years ago.
"We have built a nation, but at the cost of the reckless waste of lives of men, wild beasts, forests and rivers," he said. "Future generations will stand appalled at our carelessness. Our heritage has been squandered, a few getting rich at the expense of the many. Our trees have been cut down, the savages have been driven into reservations to die of disease, our streams have been dammed or polluted until they are like common sewers, our mountains have been exploited, our soil has been carelessly farmed."
He spoke of the indifferent attitude that permits citizens to allow a half dozen men ravage the forests of northern Wisconsin, that allow the Fox river to become so polluted and so lacking in air that fish cannot live in it, that account for the miles of deserted farms and impoverished soil in the east, and the brush overgrown fields of the south.
Blames Man's Greed
Talking of the efforts of the local association to recreate, Mr. Bradford said that it was not the rifle or the shotgun that had depleted the game in this vicinity, but the greed of man for the dollar. Game birds have been destroyed to such an extent that they can come back only partially, he said, because man has destroyed their homes. He told about the game refuges which have been established, about the 15 feeding stations that have been set up, and the program for the propagation of fish. Moving pictures of the planting of bass and pheasants in Outagamie-co were presented.

He explained the association's plan to reforest some of the delinquent lands in the county. The county is being urged to secure the tax titles to all delinquent lands, and if this is done the association will plant 5,000 trees a year in an attempt to reclaim the land.

TRIBUTARIES THREATEN TO CAUSE FLOOD

Mississippi River Being Filled by Heavy Flows from Delta Streams

Greenville, Miss. — (AP) — Father Mississippi, usually an amiable old reprobate, is being goaded to violence by his wandering sons—tributary rivers that get full in riotous living, then stagger down to the old man's homestead and pour all their troubles on him.

Figuratively that is the situation in the lower Mississippi valley today where many feeder rivers are dumping their surplus into the big river and forcing a flood menace of dangerous magnitude.

A disastrous flood on the Mississippi may be avoided this season through prowess of engineers who have got the old man pretty well blarneyed with levees and are keeping him in bed. Rivermen say the situation is well in hand now, but the Mississippi is above flood stage and he is not worthy of the slightest trust when in that condition.

If he does flood, and he is virtually certain to cut a few capers, he has nobody to blame but his own family of little rivers which got tanked this winter and are now in shape to handle the spring rains.

Northern snows have been light and the valley has little to fear yet from the upper tributaries. The Missouri, an old pal of father Mississippi on many a spree, has been well behaved. Even the Ohio, as temperamental as a prima donna, has been unusually kind. Of course, heavy rains in the upper watershed will change the situation and play havoc down here, but so far the Mississippi has had excellent cooperation outside his own immediate family.

Delta Rivers Threat

It is the delta rivers, those mean little fellows that don't play fairly, that double-crossed the valley and got on a winter spree. They broke through their levees and went scampering through peoples' houses and now they are pouring a tremendous surplus into the Mississippi. And the big river doesn't like. He has all he can handle, so he is pushing their overflow back up their channels and flooding their mouths.

When the tributaries get so full and the Mississippi catches flood stage it is a dangerous sign because the spring rains are still to come.

The prodigal rivers form a network in Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana. Many are not known generally except around their own playground. There is the Little River, a vicious little fellow that is a giant when full. And the beautiful St. Francis and White, both big streams even at low stages.

The Arkansas is a dangerous contributor, as is the Cache. The Ouachita, Hurricane, Red and Bartholomew are all in ugly moods. Their lowlands are suffering inundation. Some of these work into the Atchafalaya basin, but it all is part of the lower valley.

In Mississippi, the Yazoo, Sunflower, Tallahatchie and others are raging. Many settlements have been flooded and many middle delta plantations have suffered virtual ruin.

The signs are bad, but the people are optimistic. Faith in the new levees is great. And there is always the hope that the spring rains will be light.

LOS ANGELES WOMAN

Bootlegger Says He Hit Woman With Iron Bar and Buried Body

Los Angeles — (AP) — Without display of emotion, James A. Reid, bootlegger, told police today how he had beaten to death Mrs. Anne Terrell, 46, and buried her body under the floor of the garage at a residence the two had occupied.

"I just don't know why I did it," he said. "We had an argument about legging and I hit her over the head with an iron bar."

The body of Mrs. Terrell, a former resident of Minneapolis, Minn., was found yesterday. Reid, 45, was arrested six hours later in Santa Monica, where he had taken Mrs. Terrell's 11-year-old daughter, Harriet, on Feb. 12, several days after the slaying. He had told the girl her mother was on location with a motion picture company.

"We were always arguing," Reid told police. "She wanted me to go back to bootlegging, but I didn't want to—I'd been arrested twice before and I didn't want to get knocked over again. I wasn't drunk, but I got so mad I picked up an iron bar and let her have it. I was sorry right away, but that didn't do me any good."

Discovery of Mrs. Terrell's body resulted from police searching for furnishings missing from the house. Juvenile authorities took charge of the slain woman's daughter.

"LYSISTRATA" CAST

Los Angeles — (AP) — Although acquitted of one charge of staging an indecent show, the two producers and 52 members of the cast of Aristophanes' farce, "Lysistrata," today faced another charge as a result of the second raid made on the show during its local presentation.

A jury yesterday, after less than two hours of deliberation, found the producers and cast not guilty of the charge resulting from the first raid. The defendants are to appear in court today in connection with the charge growing out of the second raid. The city prosecutor has not indicated whether he will demand a trial or move for a dismissal.

Nancy O'Neil, veteran actress, headed the cast of "Lysistrata," which dealt with the theory that war might end if women would live apart from the men until such time as the men would agree to end their wars.

WOMEN TO TAKE CHARGE OF AURORA FOR SINGLE DAY

Aurora — (AP) — Let the women do the work.

That's just what they're going to do in Aurora, Feb. 23.

As long as it's leap year it was decided to have a woman mayor, a woman police chief, women traffic cops, female city commissioners, and a woman fire marshal—for the one day only.

The firemen agreed to stay on the job and rescue any of them from any fires, if necessary.

It's an idea of the chamber of commerce. The women will be running the local paper and the street cars too—under supervision of regular crews.

CHINESE WOULD GIVE U. S. AIRMAN
MILITARY BURIAL

Japan Plans Protest to America for Aviator's Part in Battle

Shanghai — (AP) — T. V. Soong, former finance minister of the Chinese Nationalist government, said today he was telegraphing the mother of Robert Short, American flier reported shot down and killed at Soochow yesterday in an engagement with Japanese planes, asking her to allow her son to be buried in China.

He said the National government wished to give him a military funeral and to grant him posthumous honors within the aviation service.

The National government, he added, would inform Short's mother that it was appreciative of what her son had tried to do for China and regretful of the fatal outcome.

In spite of the fact that Chinese officials here took it for granted Short was killed, advices from Nanking today were indefinite about it. Dispatches said it was reported there that an American flier had been killed at Soochow while fighting Japanese but no official report from Soochow had been received at Nanking.

The American consulates at Nanking and Shanghai also said today they had received no information concerning the incident.

General Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the Chinese army here told newspapermen at his headquarters today that he was advised from Nanking that Short was killed at Soochow "while flying a commercial plane." The Le Gale company, however, American importers of Boeing airplanes such as Short was flying when he left Shanghai last Friday for Nanking to deliver a plane to the Chinese government said the plane in question was a military pursuit ship carrying two machine guns fully equipped with ammunition.

Short's body was recovered although badly burned, according to the information available here and it is now understood to be on the way to Shanghai by authority of Chinese officials. The Chinese press here featured the story today and lauded Short as "a great friend of China, seeking to assist her against Japanese aggression."

Shanghai — (AP) — It was learned here today that Japanese authorities planned to lodge a protest with the United States government over the case of Robert Short, American aviator who was reported shot down and killed yesterday at Soochow while engaged in combat with Japanese airplanes.

ARTIFICIAL NOISES ARE USED IN BROADCASTING

Madison — (AP) — That realistic airplane roar you hear over the radio is probably only the sound of a vacuum cleaner and that torrential downpour of rain only salt falling on wax paper or crisp lettuce.

In such ways the radio dramatist brings a realistic touch to the drama, Prof. Henry L. Ewbank of the University of Wisconsin department of speech has found. Prof. Ewbank has compiled a list of artificial radio noises.

To imitate a mild rain the radio weatherman rubs excelsior on the microphone stand. Paddies on a revolving wheel which strike the free end of a suspended piece of canvas gives the radio listener wind. Low speeds make a summer breeze; high speeds a gale.

The sound of an automobile motor starting is imitated by holding a blotter against the blades of an electric fan that is gaining speed. Rattling a piece of stove pipe through a pane of glass produces the "collision" between a truck and a street car.

When the radio dramatists have the police break down a door to capture the villain, the radio listener is probably hearing the twisting of the frail wood of a berry basket. Rustling tissue paper produces sounds of a water fall and by churning cornstarch in a bowl the radio hearer might have you believe someone is walking on crisp snow, Prof. Ewbank's findings reveal.

Roosevelt Faces Stiff Test In March Elections

Washington — (AP) — Plans for a searching three-way analysis of the vote-pulling power of Franklin D. Roosevelt are nearing completion in the testing laboratories of the Democratic party.

In closely-spaced primaries in March the New York governor's presidential aspirations must meet three separate challenges. On March 8, in New Hampshire, his opponent is Alfred E. Smith. On March 15, in North Dakota, he meets Governor William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray. On March 23, in Georgia, he contests with Speaker John N. Garner.

Thus, in the space of about two weeks, almost at the outset of the pre-convention campaign, Roosevelt will undergo the extraordinary ordeal of running against an easterner in the east, a westerner in the west, and a southerner in the south.

Furthermore, the easterner is a former national standard-bearer; the westerner is building a far-flung campaign on western issues; and the southerner is endowed with the prestige of the speakership of the house.

If this test of nation-wide popularity appears too severe, there are in each instance offsetting considerations.

In New Hampshire Roosevelt was in the field far ahead of Smith, and has committed to him much of the local leadership of the party. He has a carefully chosen slate of Roosevelt delegates, without contests among themselves, whereas Smith's delegates overlap and are running in some cases against each other.

In North Dakota, too, Roosevelt has the endorsement of three party managers, and Murray is dependent largely on the fruits of a catch-as-catch-can campaign.

Georgia not only was one of the original Roosevelt states, claiming a sort of a favorite-son attachment because of the governor's frequent visits to Warm Springs, but Garner will be entered there only by a proxy arrangement.

Whatever the results, the defeated side will be able to explain that there were special reasons, but it is a disputed question how far the ordinary public goes behind the actual election figures themselves.

If Roosevelt sweeps all of these states, the momentum of his victory undoubtedly will give great impetus to the efforts of his friends as they battle for the larger delegations to

TRADIEU IS GIVEN VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Paris — (AP) — Premier Andre Tardieu was enabled today to continue his leadership of the French delegation and policy at the world disarmament conference at Geneva by virtue of the approval of his new cabinet last night by the chamber of deputies.

The vote climaxed the end of a stormy session of the chamber during which the president was twice forced to suspend the proceedings. A special train was prepared immediately afterwards to take M. Tardieu back to Geneva where he was scheduled to speak today in behalf of the French disarmament plan.

In reply to questions on the policies of the new cabinet, the premier told the chamber France was doing everything possible at Geneva to obtain peace. The declaration was the first made in the new government's behalf since its formation to replace that of Pierre Laval which resigned last week after a defeat in the senate.

The new premier said his government would be willing to negotiate an adjustment of the German reparations payments but would not permit repudiation of existing agreements.

It may be, of course, that the results will be wholly indecisive, but from this distance March gives promise of writing a prophetic chapter in party history.

Sanitary Engineers Complete Survey On Sewage Disposal Plan

PRESENT SEWER SYSTEM CALLED HEALTH MENACE

New Plan Will Serve Community for Fifty Years, Engineer Says

By Bill Chopin

Pearse, Greely and Hansen, from the Chicago company of sanitary engineers, have completed their survey on the Metropolitan Sewerage disposal plan.

This plan originated in the cities of the Fox River Valley, due to the unsanitary and inefficient system now being used. The plan was formulated by the cities because of the necessity of some sort of sewage disposal. At present the raw sewage is run into the Fox River directly from the sewer lines piped through the city. The present system is the cause of much disease and sickness to the citizens.

The cities of Neenah, Menasha, Appleton, Grand Chute, Kimberly, Combined Locks, Little Chute, and Kaukauna are interested in the plan.

The state board of health has demanded some sort of action on the present sewerage system.

The sewerage disposal plan, if put into effect, will take care of the sewerage of the cities interested for at least fifty years hence.

Two plans have been suggested. According to one, various units will dispose of their own sewerage. In this plan Neenah and Menasha will be a unit; Appleton and Grand Chute another; and Kaukauna, Combined Locks, Kimberly, and Little Chute a third.

The other plan advocates that the entire group of cities: Neenah, Menasha, Appleton, Grand Chute, Kimberly, Little Chute, Combined Locks, and Kaukauna be drained by one system which will be taken care of just below Kaukauna. According to the second plan, the sewer will be fourteen miles long and will extend from Neenah to Kaukauna.

MASQUERADE PARTIES IN VOGUE IN FEBRUARY

By Chester Cayart

During the month of February many masked parties will be planned. The most appropriate costumes for an affair of this kind will be one that presents those worn during Washington's time.

On the second floor of Pettibone Peabody store is a display of authentic costumes from the days of George Washington. Now that various social affairs are taking on a Colonial air, everyone is interested in making costumes look as much like those that George and Martha actually wore as it is possible to have them.

But where can you go for the idea about colors and color schemes? Where can you get your authentic patterns of costumes? You are very welcome to come to see the display of costumes at Pettibone's department store. They have the costumes which have been authorized by the George Washington Bicentennial commission. You are welcome to any ideas these patterns may give you for your own costumes.

If you wish to look like a fashionable lady of '76, a busy matron dressed like Betsy Ross, or your men folk aspire to represent Nathan Hale, here are replicas of their costumes in the very colors that charmed Colonial wearers. Look them over now and then plan for your next George Washington costume party.

NEW BOY SCOUT TROOP ORGANIZED AT MENASHA

By MARY ALSTED

On Tuesday evening, February 23, the first Sea Scout troop of the Saint Thomas Episcopal church at Menasha was organized. The boys, 15 years or older, have been studying sailing under James Shea for three months.

The troop will learn navigation, and this summer the members plan to have their own ship.

After the club has begun to function, William Wright of Appleton, will be its skipper.

All scout masters from Appleton, Neenah, and Menasha will meet this evening in the scout headquarters at Appleton. They plan to discuss their part in the bicentennial program for Washington's birthday and to raise the troop's rating. The scoutmasters will discuss the question of what part the scouts will take in the civic service.

TAX PAYMENTS ARE COMING IN SPEEDILY

By Bill Chopin

Taxes have been coming in very well according to reports from the city treasurer.

The largest collection of taxes for a single day was made on February 18. On this day $43,566 was collected. On Saturday, February 13, $1,753.87 was collected. This was the smallest amount taken in a single day.

There still is $30,000 Dollars to be collected. Of the 800 dog licenses, 500 have been collected, leaving a total of 300 yet to be paid.

MANY CARED FOR AT THE COUNTY JAIL

County Jail Takes Care of 25 and 40 People a Day Since Dec. 1

By Charles Herzog

An average of between 25 and 40 people a day have been taken care of at the county jail since the first of December. On one extremely cold night the roll dropped to 19. This humanitarian treatment of unfortunate is carried on under the supervision of Sheriff Lappen and administered by John F. Polson.

Supper and breakfast as well as sleeping quarters, are provided. On entering, each man is required to register his name, take a bath, and scold his clothes before he is assigned a place of rest. Hot water and general sanitary conditions provide further for his comfort.

The majority of the men thus benefited are transients. Money gone, unwilling to impose upon their relatives, and unable to obtain work, they become disappointed and take to the road. However, they are willing and eager to earn their living. One of the men was given a chance to earn his board and room by working on a farm, and he accepted the opportunity.

With the increasing demand for shelter, it became necessary to send to the state for additional equipment. A few weeks ago 25 army coats and 50 blankets were received. The men are given either a cot or a bunk to sleep on and as many blankets as they need so that they sleep well. Mr. Polson says, "We do not allow anyone of them to be cold and sleep uncomfortably."

They are given oatmeal, bread, butter, and coffee for breakfast. For supper they receive some wholesome and substantial food.

All the "patrons" are very appreciative and indicate this fact. One said with evident sincerity, "It was worth $25 for me to come here and get a good rest. Another said that it was the best place that he had found since he has been on the road, because he had had a chance to clean up."

These men represent all walks of life. They are electricians, barbers, boiler makers, bridge builders and others in the group.

One night a whole family, parents and six children came to ask for a night's lodging.

NUMBER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES DECLINES

By Marcella Haberman

Only 24 marriage licenses have been issued by the Outagamieco clerk from January 1 to the present time. This number is considerably less than the 39 which were issued during the corresponding period of last year.

Records show that 18 people have been registered from Appleton, one from Green Bay, eight from Kaukauna, three from Neenah, six from Little Chute, two from Seymour, four from Hortonville, one from Milwaukee, four from New London, and one from Black Creek.

COUNTY ROAD COSTS DECREASED THIS YEAR

By Marcella Haberman

This year the cost for repairing and taking care of the Outagamieco roads does not have to be met entirely by the county. All money spent on the state trunk highway is refunded by the state.

Approximately five thousand dollars has been used so far for the care of the roads, three thousand of which is to be paid by the state. The county highway commissioner reports that at present the roads are all in the best of condition. Some of them are icy in places, but it has been possible to keep them open.

DAYTON LEGION POST TO JOIN IN NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT DRIVE

By Betty Elias

Mr. F. A. W. Hammond, managing director of the Appleton Legion employment drive, received a letter from Dayton, Ohio, requesting information on how to carry on a similar employment drive.

The Legion post of that city intends to co-operate in the nationwide drive to furnish jobs for the unemployed by the man-a-block system.

Approximately 550 men and women have registered for jobs. Women have been placed continually by the committee. At present nearly all the positions obtained through the "block system" for women have been filled. As soon as weather conditions permit, a second drive will be made by the Legion. The purpose of this action will be to further the building and repairing projects of property owners so as to offer employment in that direction. Such building trades as painting, paperhanging, roofing, guttering, brickwork, carpentry, masonry, plumbing, and many others have been suggested.

Mr. Hammond reports that thus far no serious complaints have been received concerning the placing of unemployed. Three or four men have already received temporary jobs in building trades. Several men have been placed at the Riverside Paper corporation during the last few days.

Among the usual lists of applications for work a most unusual application was received. A request was made to secure a position of school teacher in the Philippines.

In this employment drive, which is of nation-wide interest, Wisconsin has been acknowledged among the leading states, while Appleton has been named among the most successful cities.

PHOTOGRAPHER GIVES ADVICE FOR PICTURES

By Della Van Den Bosch

"Be yourself at least when photographed." This is the advice of Mrs. Jeannette Tustison of Sykes Studio. Mrs. Tustison also said that she tries to bring out the character of a person's face rather than making the face of her subject unnaturally smooth.

Anyone who wishes to have his picture taken is advised to wear his hair softly and naturally and not in a severe curl. He should wear the clothing in which he feels best, for this gives one a comfortable feeling and is conducive to a more natural and pleasant expression in taking the picture.

It is best to wear a simple dress of one color. This is more effective and does not detract from the personality and face of the person.

WASHINGTON WOOD CARVING DISPLAYED

Carving of Washington by Mr. Vanden Boogaard Is Shown In Store Window

By Chester Cavert

Mr. Henry Vanden Boogaard has a wood-carving of Washington that he made specially for a Washington Bicentennial display. The carving is shown in a window of the Schintz drug store.

Mr. Vanden Boogaard resides at Kimberly where he is a workman in the Kimberly-Clark mill. He has taken up wood carving as his hobby and does that type of work during his spare time.

The figure is carved from a solid piece of white maple. It shows the head of Washington, as all portraits picture him and is surrounded by a frame made of oak. The head stands out from the back of the frame with all the natural expressions brought out.

This is one of Mr. Vanden Boogaard's many carvings, and its completion required 250 hours of work.

CONSTRUCTION

By Ruth Lutz

Last summer 14,000 feet of water mains were laid in the city, on the following streets: Ida, Teulohave, Newberry-st, Wadon-ave, S. Weller, N. Erb, E. South River, N. Alvin, N. Richmond, S. West-ave, N. Lave, and S. Lave.

No program of construction has yet been planned for next summer, as no petitions for new or additional mains have been brought in by the people. The office of the water department must receive its appropriations from the city council before a construction program may be planned.

CITY CLERK LIVES MIGHTY HARD LIFE

Receives Many Questions During Day from Inquisitive People

By Wilmer Stach

Did you ever stop to think about the ridiculous things you ever said to people? You know that every thing you say can be taken two ways. It all depends on where your mind is.

One day, one of our prominent doctors received a call from a mother saying: "Oh! Doctor! Hurry over here, one of the family has appendicitis!" The doctor leaped in his car and raced to the home. After a close examination he found that it was just a pin sticking the baby (a pin in the side). Just a little misunderstanding!

All people say foolish things, some 66 times or other, in their life. Ask any married man about the time he soiled his trousers getting down on knees and saying those fatal words.

When you citizens vote for a city clerk, do you know what is expected of the poor man? Yes, if you haven't heard about it before, we can inform you that our city clerk is expected to be a fortune teller, an information bureau, and a lost-and-found department besides being able to do the work which his office takes care of.

One day, as Mr. Becker was just sitting down to his labors, the telephone rang and some inquisitive person wanted to know when Houdini was born and where he lived.

You all know who Houdini was, don't you? He was the great lock breaker, and magician born in our own wonderful city of Appleton. Now how should Mr. Becker know when a lock breaker was born and where he lives? He may be in anyone's house at that time. It must be "swell" to be a magician. You could always get in the girl's friends house even if she didn't want you there. And better than that, you could read her thoughts.

But, to continue, people ask our city clerk where certain cities are, who the mayors of certain cities are, and what the populations are. Then a question is asked: "Who owns the Wisconsin Telephone company?" Mr. Becker, the city clerk, doesn't give up, though. The library is below his office, and he just takes time out to satisfy the desires of these people. They are so inquisitive that they even call Mr. Becker at his home and at all hours of the day and night. Poor Mr. Becker!

The most ridiculous question of all gets the crocheted bicycle. (A young woman and a man came to him and, in their flustering and embarrassing and perfectly happy state of mind, made the grand error of asking for a dog's license instead of a marriage license. (Maybe he wasn't far from right.)

But we must bring our discussion of these foolish questions to a climax. Mr. Becker also receives calls for missing persons and lost articles. He does his best to help these poor people, and many times succeeds. Sometimes things that we say get us into the most embarrassing of all conditions. So, with the will in mind, we will say "Aufwiedersehn."

APPLETON RESIDENTS LEAVE FOR BUSINESS

By Della Van Den Bosch

Misses Kathryn and Isabel Keller are in Milwaukee this afternoon to attend the funeral of their uncle, Mr. Carl Keller.

Miss Agnes Russon, employee in the drapery department of the Bretschneider Furniture company, is expected to return to work today. She submitted to an operation about ten days ago.

Miss Vesper Chamberlain of the Chamberlain dancing school has just returned from Milwaukee where she attended a dancing teachers' convention last Sunday. She will attend another convention there the third Sunday in March.

POST SERVICE STOPPED

Parcel post mailing service between United States and Turkey has been suspended by the United States government, and pending further instruction the post masters will refuse to accept packages for transmission. No reason has been given by the government for this action.

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED

Three new professional books have been added to the teachers' professional shelf in the Appleton high school library. These books are "Theory of Education in the United States" by Albert Nock, "Excitement of Teaching" by William non Phelps, and "Idealism in American Education" by William Larnet.

A Bum Still A Bum Whether Professional Or Unemployed

By Howard Reitz

"Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," the expression is out. The hoboes of today are not of the adventurous type; they are either professional bums or unfortunate men out of work.

It is very easy to distinguish between them. The professional bum will enter the police station and say, "How about a flop for the night?" The man looking for work will say, "May I stay here for the night?" Of course the man who has been out of work for a long time falls into the habit of the professional and becomes hardened.

The professional bum is usually a canned-beat addict. Some "tramps" drink by rum and some have been seen to drain the alcohol out of the radiators of cars parked along the streets of the city. The intoxicated hoboes are the only ones that cause the railroad officials any trouble.

Although there is a law against riding the tender, on every train passing through Appleton there are about twenty hoboes. The railroad officials do not stop them from getting on or off, for many of the men are honest and willing to work if given a chance.

The police send all the men that ask for help to the Salvation Army. These they are given supper, a night's lodging, and breakfast if they are willing to clean up their quarters. Some of them are so adverse to work that they will not clean up their quarters but go down on the avenue and bum a breakfast. Most of the hoboes are from neighboring cities and have a regular route through the valley cities which they cover every few days.

Accidents are few compared to the number of risks the men take and the conditions they are in. Once in a while a man falls off and is cut in pieces. Near Oshkosh a man built a fire in a refrigerator car and was found asphyxiated.

The ages of the hoboes vary from young men of sixteen to gray haired men of sixty and over. When the young men are asked why they don't stay at home, they say that their parents object to their staying at home and not working. These fellows many times become professional bums, because they learn, and are taught that anyone can make a living in this world without working.

One professional was heard to say that a person who worked was insane.

Panhandling in Appleton is fairly easy. One young fellow made over five dollars by standing in front of St. Joseph church Christmas morning. Most of the bobbies buy canned heat with the money they receive for a "cup of coffee." People now are beginning to realize this and take the man to a restaurant instead of giving him the money. Many of these offers are refused.

ORCHESTRA LEADER IS DEFEATED IN RACE FOR MAYOR

Seattle —(AP)—Trolley cars will have no hostesses, bands will not greet visitors and there will be no cracked ice for riders of "owl" cars in this northwestern metropolis for Vic Meyers was defeated in his "personality" campaign for mayor.

Meyers, an orchestra leader who sought the city's highest office on a platform including these planks, with his campaign managed by Laura La Plante, film actress, polled only 4,738 votes of a total of more than 113,888 cast in the primary yesterday. He ran a poor sixth in a field of nine.

"All I need to win this election was about 20,000 more votes," commented Meyers, who appeared a week ago at a Shrine Club luncheon attired as Gandhi, carrying a crook and leading a goat. "I may ask for an investigation of the voting machines to see if a vote for Meyers didn't record five for Dore."

John P. Dore, criminal attorney, lead the field by a wide margin with 45,635 votes and his supporters took that as an indication he would be elected March 8 in his contest with Mayor Robert H. Harlin, who as runner-up polled 22,625 votes.

Water Dept. Puts In New Apparatus

By Ruth Lutz

Two new filters have been installed at the filtration plant. Each has a capacity of one million gallons. This adds two million gallons, making a total of eight million gallons per day. When the plant was first built in 1914, there were four filters. In 1923 two more were added. The two that were just added bring the total number up to eight filters.

Construction has gone further at the plant. New marble operation tables have been installed. Each includes new gages which indicate the rate of the flow of water and the loss of head of each individual filter. Each individual filter is now operated by a master control. All operate in perfect unison.

The workers at the plant are now engaged in overhauling a diesel engine. These recent improvements, just completed, thoroughly modernize the filtration plant in every way.

The plant usually operates from seven in the morning until eleven at night. Sometimes they have to start the plant earlier or run later. This depends upon the fire department. Every fire alarm is recorded at the plant, and extra water is pumped if needed. This morning Mr. Hall had to start at 5:30 because an alarm was sent in by the department. Soon the pumping of water will increase from three to five million gallons a month. In the summer the rate increases from 80 to 35 per cent, according to the dryness of the season.

Everyday Mr. Hall tests and checks the water to see that it is as pure as the state board of health requires it. Once every month it has to be checked and approved by the national treasurer of the water department.

Visitors come from all parts of the country and are welcome at all times. Just recently the McKinley junior high school students visited the plant. Soon classes from Lawrence college, and from the senior high school will visit the plant.

CLASS OF '32 WILL BE LARGEST TO GRADUATE

By Viola Deichen

Final check-up of the class of 1932 reveals that it will be the largest class to graduate in the history of the school. At present there are 323 students who expect to receive diplomas either in June at the regular commencement exercises or in August after they have completed their required summer school work.

Previously the largest class to graduate was the class of 1930, which had 257 members. The enrollment of the present class will exceed this number by about sixty-six people.

TREASURER'S OFFICE TO RECEIVE REPAIRS

By Marcella Haberman

Between 500 and 400 dollars will be spent in remodeling the office in the court house of the county treasurer, Miss Marie Ziegenhagen. The rapid increase in work necessitates some kind of enlargement of the working quarters.

Approximately 135 more square feet will be added to the office, making it extend into the lobby. The work will consist mainly of tearing out one partition and extending another.

The remodeling will begin very soon, although the county board of commissioners has not yet set a definite date for the project.

COSTIGAN TAKES OVER DEMOCRATIC REINS IN SENATE

New Senator Leads Relief
Fight and Makes Big Hit

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—The hungry unemployed, although this fact may not elate them, should at least realize that they occasioned the most brilliant triumph of oratory heard here in many years and split both parties in the senate as bitterly and clearly as any issue we have had. Agitation for federal unemployment relief continues in Congress because of a strengthened belief in the need. But the two-week fight for the $750,000,000 LaFollette-Costigan bill, although unsuccessful, already stands as the most effective solid-front attack the minority Progressives group has yet made in Congress.

It was spectacular in the extreme. But it was also important because it drew more sharply than ever the line of cleavage between Conservatives and Progressives which becomes increasingly more strongly marked than the artificial division between the Republicans and Democrats.

Big Guns Thunder
The individual performances of Borah, LaFollette, Costigan, Johnson and Norris—Progressive leaders in that fight—could best be compared with the thundering of big guns which tore great holes in impregnable ramparts.

For once, those orators were commonly fired with grim, bitter determination in a struggle against human suffering. They gave it everything they had. They attained their respective peaks.

Fess of Ohio and Reed of Pennsylvania, upholding the administration's opposition to the bill, were also impassioned, able and sincere in their own flashes of oratory. They personified the cause of conservatism.

Unfortunately or not, however, you can usually move more people while promoting the cause of hungry women and children than you can in expounding theories of government.

Reed's Successor
Costigan of Colorado, a new senator on the Democratic side, took his place as one of the ablest senate leaders almost immediately.

Excessively courteous and always unperturbed, speaking usually in quiet, even tones, he was perhaps the deadliest of the Progressive lot as he lashed the leadership of his own party, harpooned those who rose to face him in debate as neatly as Jim Reed of Missouri over did the job and wound up his initial speech with the embarrassing theme song "Billions for big business, but no mercy for mankind."

BUYER SHOULD NOW BUY BEST COMMON STOCKS AVAILABLE

Expert Says Opportunity
Is Present to Recoup Losses

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
(Copyright, 1932, by Cons. Press)
New York—Premising that funds are available from the investor's own resources involving no borrowing and that he is in a position to hold securities now acquired, the problem of investment resolves itself into selection of a medium. For the present we are discussing common stocks leaving preferred issues and bonds for subsequent consideration.

This is not the usual order of treatment and the reason for its adoption needs to be stated. Partly it is because the average small investor is still "common stock minded" notwithstanding all that has happened in the past two years and partly because the best chance of recouping the losses we have all sustained in that same period lies in the field of equities rather than in mortgage.

The writer is aware that on this point he may be criticized as advocating speculation against which he has often and so strenuously pleaded. There is some merit in the objection but not much and certainly it can be urged with less force today than ever before. Furthermore, we are not suggesting a trading program. It is simply that investment in stocks of common stocks representative of the leading corporation in their respective spheres of activity gives the investor at the prevailing security price levels value above the market estimate of that value and the reasonable expectation of capital appreciation when and if business improves. It gives these investors in greater measure proportionate to the risk than may be had anywhere else.

In the past of common stock investment, however, the possibilities are so numerous and so varied that the difficulty of making the right choice remains. If it were possible to diversify sufficiently that trouble would be obviated but the man of limited means and he is the one to whom these articles are addressed cannot diversify. His funds will not permit. He might resort to shares in or out of nations of investment trusts but there are objections to that course.

The only practically policy left is to confine commitments to stocks

MORE SHEEP IN STATE, BUT PRICES ARE LOWER

Madison —(P)—While the size of Wisconsin sheep flocks has been increasing their value has dropped. Figures released today by the Wisconsin and United States Department of Agriculture reveal.

Between January 1, 1931 and the first of this year, the number of sheep on Wisconsin farms increased representative of corporations with themselves have diversified their trade activities. Examples will occur to every reader who has even a casual acquaintance with the stock list. This requirement may rule out ventures which a year hence we can see would have been profitable but there is no help for that.

In the second place diversification can be practiced by the individual to the extent that he takes only a few shares in each corporation at a time and those in enterprises non competitive with any other interests he may have.

three per cent bringing the total of 545,000 head, the department said. During this period the price of sheep per hundredweight fell from $2.62 to $1.80 and the price of lambs dropped from $6.22 per hundredweight to $4.80. The total value of Wisconsin sheep is $1,761,000.

Throughout the United States the department reported the same trend as registered in Wisconsin. The total number of sheep on American farms is now estimated at 53,912,000 head valued at $183,255,000.

VON HINDENBURG RUNS AGAIN

Perhaps the greatest possible stabilizing influence for a continuation of republican Germany was the announcement of President Paul von Hindenburg that he would be a candidate to succeed himself when his present term expires this spring.

The steady growth of communism in Germany on the one hand and the rise of the National Socialist party, or Hitlerites, representatives of German fascism on the other, have been serious threats to the new German republic. The Hitlerites, particularly, by their violent denunciations of the Versailles treaty and their militant expositions against any further reparation payments have created much uneasiness in European politics and the decision of Germany's "iron man" to stand for re-election has relieved the tension in many quarters beyond the German borders.

There is perhaps no other man in Germany who has such tremendous popularity as the famous World war military leader. Reared, as was his father and grandfather, under the strict discipline of German militarism, his career was already a distinguished one in the fatherland on his retirement from the army in 1911. The World war brought him back into the service and by his victory at Tannenberg he became a national hero. His portrait was in every home; many statues were erected in his honor. He rapidly advanced to the rank of commander-in-chief of the German armies and at the end of the conflict, he retired to his small home in Hanover, an aged, unhappy man.

On the death of President Ebert in 1925, von Hindenburg was persuaded to accept the nomination as his successor and he polled, an enormous vote, elected by an overwhelming majority.

In his service to the new republic he has belied the fears of many that the old militaristic and jingoistic elements of German kaiserism and "junkerism," so recently repulsed in war, would again become the controlling forces in government. He soon dissipated these worries and has discharged his responsibilities as president of the new republic with all the loyalty and courage he had so long displayed under the old regime.

Von Hindenburg is 84 years old and has been president for seven trying years, yet his stride is still martial. His personal popularity is so great that it will be difficult for any man to defeat him. He stands today as the symbol of German continuity—a mighty force for stability and sound conservatism, and the one man best fitted to hold a steady course through the storms that now threaten the nation's safety.

THEY GOT THEIR MAN

Far up in the grim vastness of the northland within range of the Arctic circle a tradition of the Royal Canadian Northwest Mounted Police has again been fulfilled. They got their man. The mad trapper of Rat river has been killed.

The story that these barren wastes unfold has no equal except in the imaginations of fiction writers who pick their lurid details from out the flickering flames of their cozy hearthstones.

A man had gone mad—a man with muscles of steel and a heart as cold as the icy winds he defied. When he came into this north country no one knew. Looking for gold, he said, but soon became a marauder of Indian trap lines and thus subject to the discipline of the long but slender arm of the Canadian Mounted.

The first officer to attempt his apprehension was shot, but lived. The second to take the trail in pursuit was shot, and died. Then into the frozen wastes rushed this man of tremendous strength and unerring aim, a desperate, resourceful and shrewd bushman, followed by the most skillful scarlet-jacketed trailers of the mounted police. For three weeks he outwitted his pursuers as a fox outmaneuvers the wolf pack, musing 40 miles a day and puzzling those on his trail as to how he kept going, when and where he slept and how he got his food. Then in the last skirmish, one more officer went to his death and another was dangerously wounded.

No fitting moral can be drawn from this tragic fate of a man suddenly gone insane. It is sufficient to contemplate the courage, daring and esprit de corps of a famous police organization whose long arm reached far into the wastes of the northland in its enforcement of the law.

WHERE CRIME IS BRED

One of the commonest American beliefs is that most criminals are mentally defective, and that the crime wave would ebb to a ripple if only some way could be found of putting a serviceable mind into the head of each crook.

Now, however, Dr. Amos T. Baker, psychiatrist at Sing Sing prison, comes along to tell us that we're mistaken. Addressing a session of the American Orthopsychiatric Association in Baltimore the other day, he declared that the mentality of most criminals compares favorably with that of law-abiding citizens.

Most criminals, he said, go wrong because of unfavorable home conditions and not because they are mentally deficient. Heredity has little to do with filling prisons. Environment is all-important.

It would be more pleasant, possibly, to stick to the older idea and blame it all on heredity. That would relieve us of all responsibility. But we can't do it, and Dr. Baker's remarks ought to make us stop and do a bit of thinking.

That expression, "unfavorable home conditions," can cover a whole lot of ground—and society as a whole has a direct responsibility in it.

It covers, for example, homes in city slums, where health conditions are bad, food is poor and the street is a child's only playground.

It covers homes in certain mining towns, where the workers are ground down by poverty, live in conditions of sickening squalor and count themselves lucky if they can just get enough to eat from day to day.

It covers homes in rotten tenements which, if we had any social conscience at all, would be torn down no matter what the cost; homes on isolated back-country farms where a child can grow up without any advantages whatsoever; homes in dull factory towns where a mill-owner is absolute czar over all his workers—homes everywhere, in short, that belong in what the sociologists call the "under-privileged" stratum.

That is where our crime stems from. As long as society is willing to let a large number of human beings live in such homes it will have a nasty "crime problem." We all share in the responsibility.

EXHAUSTING RESERVE STOCKS

A short telegraphic dispatch printed recently in the Post-Crescent may have been entitled to a good deal more prominence than it received.

It stated that the Studebaker Company was increasing prices on all models of its cars from $20 to $100 each, effective March 1, because its entire reserve stock of materials purchased last year for less than production cost had been consumed, and that it was required to pay a higher price for new materials.

Roger Babson once stated that this, like similar depressions, will be over for several months before we realize it.

We do not know how extensively the Studebaker condition prevails with other manufacturers; but when reserve stocks are exhausted men must be put to work to produce more which will not be sold below the cost of production because the price will be sustained by a genuine and earnest demand.

We seek no place in the gallery of prophets, for, like hullabalooing medicine men at a big pow-wow, they have talked so much and so noisily as to become rather discredited, but it will be a happy day for all when there are no reserve stocks on the shelves, just as it was an unhappy day when those reserves piled up too high.

Folks, there's going to be a bootlegger's convention, an honest-to-gosh bootleggers' honest-to-gosh convention. It's the eastern clique of rum-runners who will meet and they're meeting up in Halifax where they can discuss business without the constant temptation of speakeasies.

The visiting delegates report that business is good but that the competition is a bit stiff. They expect to reach some agreement on the price of likker, too.

Which shows how things are improving under prohibition. Scarcely a year ago, the boys wouldn't have bothered with a convention, they'd have turned the matter over to the popgun department and whoever got popped first was all through arguing about price, district and competition.

A PATIENT GOLFER EXPLAINS

Old Bill Jones is a golfer brave and a patient soul is he. When he dubs a shot he may like it not, but a smile is all you'll see. Though some men swear and tear their hair and scatter their clubs about Old Bill just grins at high golfing sins and silently walks them out.

There are times I've known when old Bill Jones was a strong man sorely tried. But never a word from his lips I heard though he must have boiled inside. And I whispered low: "No man can show such marvelous self-control; There will come a day when he'll throw away his everlasting soul."

Old Bill Jones kept his happy grin almost to the season's end. Good luck or bad he still seemed glad to be out with a golfing friend. But there came the day, with one hole to play, when a drive meant several pounds. And Old Bill shot with a mighty swat—and that ball went out of bounds!

He took one look at that hook and turned, like a madman on the tee. We three stood still and gazed at Bill, for his face was a sight to see. His veins stood out, as he strode about, ere the speech began to flow.

Then he frightened the birds in the trees with words which he wasn't supposed to know. (Copyright, 1932, Edgar A. Guest)

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Wednesday, Feb. 27, 1907

The Independent Telephone company, in which a number of Appleton men were interested, had purchased the independent system in Waukegan county, thus giving this company entry in that direction.

Miss Gertrude Kurtz and Louis Glasnap were married the previous afternoon by Justice Capt. Cook.

Miss Grace King was in Green Bay to spend a few days with friends.

Harry Humphrey visited with friends at Menasha the previous day.

Louis Elron, who had been at Oconto Falls for two weeks on business, had returned to Appleton.

Arthur Kimball, Charles Schwartz, and Max Gmeiner spent the previous day at Kaukauna with friends.

E. T. O'Brien, formerly of Appleton, then principal of schools at Berlin, was in Appleton the previous day, making an inspection of the ventilation system at Appleton high school.

TEN YEARS AGO

Wednesday, Feb. 23, 1922

Appleton was practically cut off from communication with the outside world that day by one of the worst rain and sleet storms in several years. Wire communication with the south was entirely cut off and only a few places north and east of the city were available by telephone and telegraph.

A brief history of Appleton was read to the Outagamie Pioneers association at its fifth annual meeting at Odd Fellow hall that afternoon by its secretary, W. M. Roblee.

Seventy-two Appleton people and sixteen from other places in Outagamie-co attended the semi-annual Wisconsin State society picnic in Sycamore Grove, South Pasadena, Calif., on Feb. 16, according to word received here.

George Ba'win had been selected by the secretary of the National Association of Real Estate boards to represent Appleton Real Estate board at the meeting of the national executive committee to be held in the Waldorf hotel at Washington, D. C., March 6, 7, and 8.

Miss Anita Brockman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brockman, and Walter Wickert, Grand Chute, were married that evening at the home of the bride's parents on N. Division-st.

Personal Health Talks

EXTRAVAGANCE IN HEALTH EXAMINATIONS

Judging by the great numbers of victims who have written in for consolation or sympathy or perhaps interpretation of mystifying reports "after they've been had by one of these 'institute' companies" or "bureaus" that sells so-called periodic health examination services to the wisecracks public there must be thousands of such customers wandering about with both hands full of disturbing reports and no place to find out what it all means.

Far be it from me to ridicule these poor gullible customers. It would be ungracious to pretend to see anything funny about their plight especially in view of the fact that the regular medical profession has acquiesced if it has not actually shared in the racket. You see it is a breach of the code or principles of medical ethics for a physician to advertise for patrons. But if a physician has no practice and is unable to build one of his own in the customary way, he may still get around the difficulty neatly enough by going into a huddle to confuse the dumb doctors in the medical society, and emerging as a "corporation," "clinic," or an "institute" and as such carrying on his advertising campaign unhampered by petty ethical restriction, thus getting the business yet still retaining good professional standing, or at least all the appearances of good standing, for somehow the small fry in the profession never dare question such practice or never does utter a derogatory word about it.

The courts decided recently that X-ray pictures for which a patient had paid belonged not to the patient but to the doctor or to the hospital, as part of the records of the case. There is more in that than may occur to the casual reader. In my opinion all laboratory reports, records or all findings of the physician likewise belong to the doctor, even if the patient had paid specific fees for the examinations. As a health question merely, I think all such records should be kept by the doctor and never given to the patient. And accordingly I believe these periodic health examination packets have done a great deal of actual harm by placing such reports or records in the hands of their customers.

If you are really concerned about your own health by all means go to your own physician for any examination he may deem advisable. When the examination is finished let the physician give you what advice he thinks your condition or circumstance indicates. If he is a good doctor and worth consulting at all, he will interpret his findings clearly enough for you, and he will not give you any technical data to worry about.

It is my conviction that a man or woman is foolish to spend any money or time undergoing a medical examination of any kind unless he or she has some definite complaint or is in doubt about the healthfulness of his or her habits or environment and therefore needs professional advice.

This does not imply that one should give no thought to hygiene or health. On the contrary, I am sure it is an excellent thing for every man and woman to study and practice the ways of health. I said health and hygiene, not disease and its treatment.

It wasn't very long until the steel man sat down, very still. "It's all right now," said Scouty. "Come, we'll drop out of the tree." The other Tynmites were game so, one by one, right down they came. And then the builder said to them, "Another sight you'll see."

He pointed to a funny thing and cried, "Much fun that ought to bring. It is a caterpillar that goes skimming 'long the ground, I'll give you Tynmites a ride. All you need do is climb inside." "You bet," exclaimed wee Duncy. And they jumped in with a bound.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Four Score and Four

I am four score and four years old and I work every day. I have been reading your column since the deluge. I'd like to tell the public that one way to restore prosperity is to eat wheat, just as it comes from the threshing and as Dr. Brady recommends and stop taking physic. I enjoy my daily ration of wheat.

(Miss M. B.)

Answer—I'm afraid it's no use, friend. The public has been educated to believe what as nature provides it is scarcely fit to eat. People love mystery, and so the wheat must have mysterious "processing" or something to make it oke for table use.

How to Fall Asleep Like Baby

I joined the B. B. Club several months ago, and the result has been marvelous. I often go to sleep before I have reached the tenth infatuation whereas before I seldom found sleep within an hour . . . (Mrs. H. M. G.)

Answer—Belly breathing is good medicine for insomnia, high blood pressure, the functional difficulties of girls and women, cold feet, poor circulation. Want to join the B. B. Club? Ask for Belly Breathing instructions and inclose stamped envelope bearing your address.

In a very instructive article on pneumonia you explained that the boozier has a poor chance, because alcohol prevents his white corpuscles from recruiting a sufficient fighting or defense force. Why not tell the whole truth and explain that the same thing is true of the smoker . . . (C. M. R.)

Answer—Why not? Because it is not true.

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THE steel man walked with arms stretched out until the buncer heard Scouty shout, "We'd better climb up in a tree where we'll be safe and sound."

"We'd better climb up in a tree where we'll be safe and sound," he said, "I'm really scared down here because he's walking all around."

"You're right," yelled Windy. "Follow me. I've found a great big spreading tree. There's room out on the branches for us all. Come, let's be quick. The man who owns the steel man may just think this is a sort of play, but if you ask me, frankly, I would say it's not so slick."

So, up the tree the whole bunch went. Beneath their weight the branches bent. "Don't topple off," cried Coppy. "It's a long way to the ground. Hang on, with both your hands, real tight and everything will be all right. I think that we are lucky since a safe place has been found."

Just then they heard a laugh below. It was a merry "Ho, ho, ho!" And then their friend the builder cried, "I'll stop my big steel man. The way he made you Tynmites run was really quite a bit of fun. But now I'll turn his lever off as quickly as I can."

It wasn't very long until the steel man sat down, very still. "It's all right now," said Scouty. "Come, we'll drop out of the tree." The other Tynmites were game so, one by one, right down they came. And then the builder said to them, "Another sight you'll see."

He pointed to a funny thing and cried, "Much fun that ought to bring. It is a caterpillar that goes skimming 'long the ground, I'll give you Tynmites a ride. All you need do is climb inside." "You bet," exclaimed wee Duncy. And they jumped in with a bound.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY WILLIAM GAINES

New York—You have no idea how accommodating some of the movie publicity strategists can be in making news for the benefit of fan readers.

Any question not embarrassing to their studio organization stands a good chance of getting a "yes" answer from these exploitation geniuses. Which may be very nice if the interrogator is not interested in developing facts.

Certainly the studio does not deserve anonymity in this incident I cite. And revealing names would have no effect upon the star. But let us consider the gentleman in the company's home office who placed in my hands the telegrams from the west coast studio.

He gave evidence that his collaborators had caused him a slight nausea, and we wouldn't want to heap the indignation of his bosses upon his head, in case they thought he was revealing business secrets.

I had heard that a certain male star, in high favor at present, planned to emulate Gary Cooper. That is that he was about to embark upon an adventurous journey which would take him away from work and his horde of feminine admirers for awhile.

Just a Horse Laugh

At my request the home office man telegraphed his studio brethren for some information. They answered: "—is a newest activity in polo. STOP Has a string of horses and creating quite a sensation STOP Also leaving Wednesday for Santa Cruz island to hunt wild boars STOP"

Hm. Certainly interesting about wild boars on Santa Cruz, but to a fact hunting and somewhat skeptical reporter it was too vague. Well, well. I asked my friend to wire back for all the details of the dream.

It seems that when you ask for details you frustrate the ingenuity of such inventive minds. Here's answer No. 2:

"You wired asking us to give you something to tie up story on STOP We faked up something STOP Now you wire us for all the details STOP Have a heart STOP—doesn't even own a horse and never heard of Santa Cruz STOP."

They must have meant it in the first message when they said "STOP."

Flicker Snicker

Another snicker was supplied by the New York chieftain of another film firm, who made most flattering remarks about a young star in his Hollywood studio.

He didn't want to be quoted by name, urging:

"Credit that statement to a 'high executive' of my company."

Asked why, he explained:

"If we ever had to go into court against her over a contract or anything the first thing her lawyer'd do would be to produce my words of praise, as head of the company. And he'd be asking the jury why I changed by mind when money was at stake."

"Then what would I say?"

"Anyway, this mogul is frank in private. And you'll find very few publicity puffs for movie or stage personages that have any tie-ups with the bosses' names."

Says Frederick G. Eberhard, mystery story writer: "I am an inveterate piano player and play the instrument in the black keys just to be morbid."

U. S. ARTILLERY IN ACTION
On Feb. 24, 1918, American artillery silenced a German battery in the Toul sector of the western front in one of the fiercest artillery duels of the month.

The German auxiliary cruiser Wolf returned to Kiel on that date after sinking 11 Allied vessels during a 15-months' cruise as a raider in the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans.

At the same time, the Spanish ship Igota-Mendi, with a German prize crew aboard, was driven ashore in Denmark and interned by the Danish government. Two Americans were included in the 22 prisoners aboard.

After the German government announced its complete acceptance of German peace terms, although Leon Trotsky threatened to resign his post as foreign minister because of the drastic terms.

Fighting on the Italian and western fronts was confined principally to artillery fire and local trench raids.

Tax Paying Period Extended By Common Council Until June 1

USUAL PENALTY OF 2 PER CENT WILL BE WAIVED

Extension Granted to Persons Occupying Own Homes, Business Places

The common council last night took official cognizance of slack business conditions when it extended taxpaying time until June 1 to all persons occupying their own homes, manufacturers and merchants doing business in their own buildings and to merchants in rented properties assessed for personal property taxes who file affidavits stating they are unable to meet their assessments at the present time. The usual 2 per cent penalty will be waived, the council decided.

Property owners who do not occupy their properties will be compelled to pay their taxes before March 1 if they would avoid the penalty. The affidavit of inability to pay is essential to secure extension of time to pay in all cases.

For a time it seemed that the council would re-enact the county board motion-upon-motion tangle, but after the resolution recommended by the finance committee was amended to the satisfaction of the majority of aldermen it was adopted by a 12 to 1 vote. C. D. Thompson casting the only negative vote. Aldermen C. O. Davis, Wenzel Hassman, Philipp Vogt, C. J. Wassenberg and Thompson voted against the amendment, which granted extensions on personal property as well as real estate.

The original resolution, formulated by Alderman George Richard and recommended by the finance committee, extended the time for homeowners who live in their own homes, and merchants and manufacturers, including individuals, corporations, and co-partners, who are conducting a business on the property for which they seek extension. The amendment concerning personal property was added after it was pointed out that many business men who are renting are just as responsible of paying their taxes as those who own their own buildings.

The question of relief for those persons who will find it difficult to pay special assessments on property, especially vacant lots, they do not occupy, and for those who have granted rent extensions on a number of homes they own but do not occupy, was brought up but no action was taken.

City Will Borrow
Mayor John Goodland, Jr., explained that with the contract the city has with the First National bank which permits the council to borrow at 4 1/2 per cent, it is much easier for individuals to borrow than it is for individuals. He said that it would be necessary to borrow only a small amount and that the extension which will help so many who are unable to pay, will be no burden on the city. He admitted that a number of persons would take unfair advantage of the offer, but he felt that conditions warranted an action of this kind.

Alderman Mike Steinhauer appealed for protection of the businessmen who does not own the building in which he operates. He pointed out that adding this class would be, in the final analysis, a check on unemployment, as these business places, just as much as those who operate on their own property, employ help. While Alderman Vogt was reluctant to throw the offer open to everyone, because of the resultant abuse of the privilege, Alderman Thompson stood almost entirely alone in his contention that the resolution was simply an inducement to people to refrain from paying their taxes, merely training the public to assume that the city will continue to grant extensions.

Thompson Fights Move
"Of course it's a nice thing to be good fellows—right now," he said. "We'll get a lot of credit, but we're not acting for the best interests of the city. It would be all right to grant the extension after March 1, I believe it might be a wise thing to extend the time for homeowners, but not for merchants, for they can borrow to pay their taxes."

Arguing that many will take unfair advantage of the extension, he cited instances of persons who had come to the treasurer's office to pay their taxes, but paid them only after they had ascertained that the council had not extended the time. "If they had learned that the time was extended," he said, "they would have returned home with the money they had intended to apply on their taxes."

Explaining the original resolution, Alderman Richard pointed out that the finance committee had not included persons owning buildings and renting them for profit, as it was felt that this constituted an investment, like stocks and bonds. He expressed the opinion that merchants could be civic-spirited enough to place the city at a disadvantage, and that no one would permit himself by untruthfully swearing inability to pay. He informed the council that the state law on extensions to those classes unable to pay, does not mention personal property.

Twice-A-Year Plan
The tax extension argument offered a wide open opportunity for the semi-annual sprouting of the twice-a-year taxpaying plan. It was introduced by Alderman Steinhauer and energetically upheld by McGilligan. Alderman Richard answered with the argument that under the present law the plan is a hazardous thing for cities, that it is not feasible, and that it places the city at a disadvantage. He showed that as the law now exists, the cities must make full return to the county, and that until the law is changed, there is no sense in again exciting the public about the plan. A new law which was formulated by the League of Wisconsin Municipalities a correct the deficiencies in the existing law was voted by the council.

UNITED STATES TO BE FIRM ON FAR EAST STAND

Stimson Outlines Government's Position in Note to Committee for the far eastern troubles. Here is Note

The text of the Stimson letter follows:

"My Dear Senator Borah:

"You have asked my opinion whether, as has been sometimes recently suggested, present conditions in China may have in any way indicated that the so-called nine power treaty has become inapplicable or ineffective or rightly in need of modification, and if so, what I considered should be the policy of this government.

"This treaty, as you of course know, forms the legal basis upon which now rests the 'open door' policy towards China. That policy, enunciated by John Hay in 1899, brought to an end the struggle among various powers for so-called spheres of interest in China which was threatening the dismemberment of that empire.

"To accomplish this Mr. Hay invoked two principles: "(1) Equality of commercial opportunity among all nations in dealing with China, and (2) as necessary to that equality the preservation of China's territorial and administrative integrity.

Nothing New

"These principles were not new in the foreign policy of America. They had been the principles upon which it rested in its dealings with other nations for many years. In the case of China they were invoked to save a situation which not only threatened the future development and sovereignty of that great Asiatic people, but also threatened to create dangerous and constantly increasing rivalries between the other nations of the world.

War has already taken place between Japan and China. At the close of that war other nations intervened to prevent Japan from obtaining some of the results of that war claimed by her. Other nations sought and had obtained sphere of interest.

"Partly as a result of these actions a serious uprising had broken out in China which endangered the legations of all of the powers at Peking. While the attack on those legations was in progress, Mr. Hay made an announcement in respect to this policy as the principle upon which the powers should act in the settlement of the rebellion. He said:

"The policy of the government of the United States is to seek a solution which may bring about permanent safety and peace to China, preserve Chinese territorial and administrative unity, protect all rights guaranteed to friendly powers by treaty and international law, and safeguard for the world the principle of equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese empire."

"He was successful in obtaining the assent of the other powers to the policy thus announced.

Has Support

"In taking these steps, Mr. Hay acted with the cordial support of the British government. In responding to Mr. Hay's announcement, above signed, Lord Salisbury, the British prime minister expressed himself "most emphatically as concurring in the policy of the United States."

"For 20 years thereafter the open door policy rested upon the informal commitments thus made by the various powers. But in the winter of 1921 to 1922, at a conference participated in by all of the principal powers which had interests in the Pacific, the policy was crystallized into the so-called nine power treaty, which gave definition and precision to the principles upon which the policy rested. In the first article of that treaty, the contracting powers, other than China, agreed:

"1. To respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

"2. To provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government.

"3. To use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China.

"4. To refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly states and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states.

"This treaty thus represents a carefully developed and matured international policy intended, on the one hand, to assure to all of the contracting parties their rights and interests in and with regard to China and on the other hand, to assure to the people of China the fullest opportunity to develop without molestation their sovereignty and independence according to the modern and enlightened standards believed to maintain among the peoples of this earth.

Need Many Years

"At the time this treaty was signed, it was known that China was engaged in an attempt to develop the first institutions of a self-governing republic after her recent revolution from an autocratic form of government, that she would require many years of both economic and political effort to that end; and that her progress would necessarily be slow.

"The treaty was thus a covenant of self-denial among the signatory powers in deliberate renunciation of any policy of aggression which might tend to interfere with that development.

"It is believed that through this history of that development of the 'open door' policy reveals that faith—that only by such a process, under the protection of such an agreement, could the fullest interests not only of China but of all nations which have intercourse with her best be served.

"In its report to the president announcing this treaty, the American delegation, headed by the then secretary of state, Charles E. Hughes said:

"It is believed that through this treaty the 'open door' in China has at last been made a fact."

During the course of the discussions which resulted in the treaty, the chairman of the British delegation, Lord Balfour, had stated that:

"The British Empire delegation understood that there was no representative of any power around the table who thought that the old practice of 'spheres of interest' was either advocated by any government or would be tolerable to this conference.

So far as the British government was concerned, they had, in the most formal manner, publicly announced that they regarded this practice as utterly inappropriate to the existing situation."

Tells Stand

At the same time the representative of Japan, Baron Shidehara, announced the position of his government as follows:

"No one denies to China her sacred right to govern herself. No one stands in the way of China to work out her own great national destiny."

The treaty was originally executed by the United States, Belgium, the British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal. Subsequently it was also executed by Norway, Bolivia, Sweden, Denmark and Mexico. Germany has signed it but her parliament has not yet ratified it.

"It must be remembered also that this treaty was one of several treaties and agreements entered into at the Washington conference by the various powers concerned, all of which were interlaced and interdependent.

"No one of these treaties can be disregarded without disturbing the general understanding and equilibrium which were intended to be accomplished and affected by the group of agreements arrived at in their entirety.

"The Washington conference was essentially a disarmament conference, aimed to promote the possibility of peace in the world not only through the cessation of competition in naval armament but also by the solution of various other disturbing problems which threatened the peace of the world, particularly in the far east. These problems were all interrelated.

"The willingness of the American government to surrender its then commanding lead in battleship construction and to leave its positions out further fortification, was predicated upon, among other things, the self-denying covenants contained in the nine power treaty, which assured the nations of the world not only of equal opportunity for their eastern trade but also against the military aggrandizement of any other power at the expense of China.

BY WALTER LIPPMANN

THE JAPANESE AGGRESSION

GENEVA, Feb. 23

Last week the twelve governments represented on the Council of the League subscribed to the principle laid down in the American note of January 1. They declared that they will not recognize as valid new titles and new treaties brought into existence by violation of existing treaties, such as the Pact of Paris, the Covenant of the League and the Nine Power treaty. These declarations may conceivably amount to nothing. But it is just possible that they may mark one of the great moments in the evolution of international law.

The position in which we find ourselves is this: It has been demonstrated that as the world is now organized the power does not exist to prevent or restrain a determined aggression like that of Japan in Manchuria. The Far East is a peculiarly difficult case. The lack of a strong government in China, the power of the military east in Japan, the isolation of the Orient from the influence of Western conceptions of law, the lack of effective co-operation by Russia and the United States with organized international society combine to make ineffective in the Orient the ideal of the prevention of war. Thus there has been war in the Orient and in respect to Manchuria the Japanese are completely victorious. There is no possibility of denying it.

Nevertheless the Western nations, while admitting that they cannot halt the Japanese army, have now declared that they will not recognize its achievements. Is this important or is it not? No one can say with certainty. But if the principle we have announced is firmly adhered to, much might come of it. For when the fighting is over there must be a treaty and if this treaty is not recognized as valid by the world, it will be from the Japanese point of view a rather useless treaty. The acts of the puppet government in Manchuria will be invalid. Its laws will have no force. Any titles to property which it may grant will be tainted. Investments in Manchuria will have no standing in any court of law and no one who buys a bond or sells or buys goods will have any rights which any Western government will uphold. The Manchurian empire of Japan will have to depend upon Japan's own resources for its development. Moreover, the stability of that empire will continually be threatened. For even if a Chinese government now surrendered and signed what Japan demands, its signature would be valueless and succeeding Chinese governments would be entitled to repudiate it.

Thus if the objective of the Japanese is to impose peace and order on Manchuria, they will fail if the world adheres to principle it has announced. They can conquer Manchuria, indeed they have conquered it, but what they hold is something which they cannot consolidate. They are condemned to uncertainty and to turbulence as long as they remain

Lakehurst, N. J.—(P)—A naval board of inquiry convened here today to investigate the accident which on Monday damaged the naval dirigible, Akron.

The three board members and a recorder called as witnesses Lieut. Commander C. E. Rosendahl, the ship's commanding officer, and other officers of the Akron. The board consists of Commander Sydney M. Krause, senior member, and in charge of the naval aircraft at the Philadelphia Navy yard; Commander Alfred T. Clay, operations officer at Lakehurst, and Commander A. H. Dresel, former skipper of the Los Angeles. Lieut. George C. Calmar was the recorder.

The board members, prior to the examination of witnesses, closely inspected the damaged portion of the Akron, the broken cable and the stern handling gear, to which the ship was attached.

PERSONAL HEALTH COLUMN

Questions pertaining to your health thrirh Chiropractic will be answered in this paper if addressed to Panneck Chiropractic Clinic, 119 E. College Ave.

WHEN sickness or disease is present, Nature can cure it in the same way that she heals cuts, and in a d d s broken bones.

Nature's power to heal is limited only by an interference to this power reaching each bodily part over the system of nerves that distributes it throughout one's body. Nerve pressure then, that prevents this curative power reaching some part of the body is a sufficient amount to maintain it in a state of health. It is the real, deeper cause of disease. It is obvious, further, that the removal of this pressure, giving Nature the freedom she needs, will be an effective means of curing disease, no matter by what name such a disease is called. These are the facts of Chiropractic.

It is these facts that the Science of Chiropractic is proclaiming to the world. Many thousands of people recognizing their value have gone to Chiropractors, have had their health restored when other methods had failed, and are now telling their friends and neighbors about it. Thousands more are becoming acquainted with what this drugless science is actually accomplishing for those who are sick of being sick. And, as a result, Chiropractic is developing into a big movement—a movement for better health for the people and for more equitable laws for Chiropractors.

QUESTION: I have been reading your articles and find them very interesting. What is the meaning of your Emblem?—Mrs. R. J. M.

Answer: The Emblem portrays physical humanity rising to perfection in the white light of Chiropractic truth and knowledge or the spirit of Chiropractic leading public consciousness upward to the attainment of higher physical standards.

QUESTION: What value is the Neurotonometer that I hear of some Chiropractors using in their practice?—J. F. C.

Answer: This instrument is called Neurotonometer. It locates, for the Chiropractor using it, the impinged nerve, and then by our check reading after the adjustment is given, it proves to us whether or not the adjustment was given scientifically and correctly. It leads us straight to the back, to the location of the impinged nerve, to the adjustment of the proper vertebra and to the release of the impingement; it proves the Science of Chiropractic to be correct.

60,000 In Membership Of B. P. W.

THE National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, which is sponsoring the fifth annual observance of National Business Women's week, March 6 to 13, is the largest national organization of business women in the world. It has 1,325 branches in an equivalent number of communities in this country, the Hawaiian Islands and Alaska, and its membership numbers approximately 60,000.

It is affiliated with the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, which has branches in Canada and in 13 European countries.

While the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs is composed primarily of self-supporting women, its program has attracted such women as Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, the majority of the women who have successfully served in Congress, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, America's first woman governor; Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, first woman mayor of a large American city; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and others of equal caliber.

The Federation has sponsored two important researches into the problems of business and professional women. The first was an inquiry into the occupational history of nearly 15,000 members of the Federation, which disclosed illuminating facts about the stability of women in the business world, their earning capacity, their education, their living conditions, and their ability to save. The research committee of the National Federation, is sponsoring a second research to determine whether advancing years are a deterrent to business success, and if so, whether the middle-aged business woman can combat the situation through adequate training or psychological adjustments.

The local branch of Business and Professional Women is planning an open meeting on March 7 in observance of National Business Women's week. Members of all other women's clubs of the city will be invited to attend, and it is expected that some outstanding speaker will appear on the program.

The STORY OF SUE

By Margery Hale

RUTH opened her pocketbook and emptied its contents on her desk. A five-dollar bill, two ones. Several quarters. Some dimes and nickels. She looked at the children whose round eyes were growing larger.

"We are going to have a party," she announced. "Not now. At noon. Will you all hurry back as soon as you have had lunch?"

"But we don't eat. We stay in the yard and play," one voice answered. "We have beans, and I hate beans," somebody else said.

"Come back to the room for the last half hour of your lunch period, everyone, and we'll have a party," Ruth went on recklessly. "I have to buy the ice cream and candy first, you see. A party isn't a party without food, is it? And now let's study."

But when the bell rang she fairly flew down the street and ordered chocolate ice cream and strawberry ice cream to be sent to her room, along with paper dishes and spoons. Then she bought candy and popcorn balls and cookies. She had just enough money for car fare home when she finished.

Back in the room she laughed at the shining-eyed children. She dispensed refreshments lavishly. Then she had the class help her clear away the refuse.

Suddenly a hand went up. It belonged to Carlotta, who had a habit of twisting her hands.

"Please, Miss Bradley, I am so sick. I have such a pain in my stomach," she said.

On top of that there was a little wail from the other side of the room.

"Miss Bradley, I have a pain, too. I ache too much. But I had such a hole to fill."

Ruth looked into their faces. The children undoubtedly were ill. Half a dozen other faces looked slightly green, too. She glanced around. It seemed to her that the sickly screen of color spread from face to face. All of the children were ill!

They had asked for colored ice cream. She should have brought the coloring of the ice cream in the shop where she had made her purchases. She realized with a glad sense of relief that she had her medical kit with her. And Dr. Raynor would be along after a while. But she didn't want to see him! He would criticize her and not approve. Still . . . for a second his face as he had looked long ago, when he and she had done gay things together now and then, came drifting past. Then it was gone. She saw him as he had looked that morning. More serious. Stern.

She started to work on the children. She threw open the windows. Some of the youngsters put their heads on their desks. Some of them started to cry.

"The pain in my stomach—hurts," somebody said.

It seemed to Ruth a regular wall of voices took up the refrain. The pains were concentrated in the stomachs of the class.

There was a sound of steps in the hall. Ruth sighed hopefully. She hoped it would be Dr. Raynor. He could be disgusted if he wanted to be. But he would help her.

She looked up, hopefully.

DON'T LOUNGE OR SLUMP DOWN AT YOUR MEALS

BY ALICIA HART

A really smart woman never is a table lounge.

You know how the most beautiful woman can lose her charming hold over folks and come down to the ordinary level with a dull thud by little things she does. Well, table lounging is one of these little things!

Real poise makes you easy and pleasantly at home at the most formal function. It makes it unnecessary for you to "seem to feel at home," because you really are comfortable without any effort.

It is a good thing to remember this. Especially if you are a busy woman earning your own way you are apt to take your meals as a time to thoroughly let down, relax, even lounge. This is too bad. You really will enjoy your food more and certainly your companions will enjoy theirs and you more if you don't sit with your elbows on the table, slump down in your chair and in other ways seem careless.

A poised, charming woman always holds herself highly, as if she were a thing of real importance to herself. Beauty and manners are so closely allied that it is hard to say where one begins and the other ends, so far as general impressions go.

If you have grown careless, poise should begin at home! Sit up with a bit of dignity and keep a watch on yourself for any signs of let-down.

This is important for another reason. You can stretch and exercise and roll all you want to strengthen your muscles so you can carry new spring clothes to advantage. But if you don't practice and learn to sit right when you are at table or at your desk, you can undo the work of your daily exercises.

WE WOMEN

By Virginia Vane

DOES MARRIAGE MEAN LAZY CONTENTMENT, UNENERGETIC WIFE MUST OVERCOME THAT TOO COMFORTABLE FEELING.

Dear Virginia Vane: I have had a great deal of difficulty in keeping my husband, as he is attractive and young and other women are constantly running after him. I have been advised by outsiders to go out a good deal, myself, and see a lot of people and generally attract friends of my own. Must I do this? When I married I was very glad to get away from the tiresome business of entertaining young men night after night, just to be in the social swim. I thought I could relax and be contented when I married. Please tell me whether it is necessary to make all this effort. I particularly loathe doing anything outside my own home.

STYLIA B.

Some women CAN relax comfortably after marriage—letting care fly to the winds so far as holding their husbands is concerned. But there aren't a good many of them in the world—and certainly the girl who's married to a good-looking young man who is attracted by other pretty women will learn to tire of too much devotion if you show him plainly that you want to live for him and for no one else.

Keep as many friends as you can and steel yourself for the effort of going out. If you allow yourself to become entirely engrossed in household matters—if you become the complete good little housewife, without an outside interest to brighten up the mental horizon you can hardly expect to compete with all the sirens who seem to pursue him so violently.

If you're really in love with your hero, then it's worth while doing something about your personality to keep him interested and amused. What's the use of sitting back and saying: "No, I married in order to be comfortable, and I'm darned if I'm going to lift a finger to keep any man." That sort of argument isn't going to help you or anyone else.

Too many girls romp into matrimony with the fixed conviction that now all their problems are solved, they can be thoroughly comfortable and forget all the difficulties they encountered in pleasing their various suitors before marriage. They needn't bother to please anyone again, if they don't want to, they can tell themselves confidently and usually they find themselves all wrong.

One girl learns that she's got to hold her schoolgirl complexion if she wants to hold her beauty-worshipping mate. Another discovers that when her conversation gets stale, her husband's love dulls perceptibly so that she has to keep her wits sharpened up for his benefit. constantly. Another learns that she must keep on being the fashion-plate she was before marriage, since her husband can't bear to see her around the house in an old dress, even though he knows she is economizing for his sake.

These are a few lessons taught the very young wives who want to be lazy and relaxed and contented after marriage. Most of them find out that they have to go on being determinedly attractive to one man, just as they had to strive to please several years before they undertook matrimony.

So don't feel sorry for yourself, Sylvia. You've to make a success of this marriage, and in order to cut out competition, you've got to be the most attractive woman your husband knows. That will keep you busy, and may keep you happier than you realize.

AMERICA SHOULD WORK FOR PEACE, KIWANIS TOLD

W. C. Friedland, Menasha, Tells of America's Part in World Affairs

Menasha—"The peace and contentment which we have enjoyed through Washington's efforts should spur us on to greater efforts to win a new peace for the world," W. C. Friedland, Menasha, told the Kiwanis club at a meeting in Hotel Menasha Tuesday night.

"Are We Ready For Peace?" was the subject of Friedland's talk. Quoting Washington's warning about ordinary foreign entanglements, he explained how the United States has become involved in the world chaos existing at present. The isolation possible during Washington's time is no longer feasible and the United States, which brought nations closer by means of inventions, must bring them to thought and desire for peace, Friedland stated.

In discussing present world conditions, the speaker pointed to the Kellogg Peace pact as a mere gesture of defense without peace in the league of nations as demonstrated in the present Sino-Japanese controversy. Stating that "righteousness exalteth a nation," he described Washington's prayers at Valley Forge as a challenge to present day Americans and added that Washington's memory should create a newer, deeper and richer feeling and respect for the flag.

Heavy Armament Cost Speaking further on existing conditions which might be remedied through permanent world peace, Friedland stated that citizens of the United States paid $700,000,000 each year for armaments and $5 per cent each year for war debts.

Following Friedland's talk an open discussion relative to the proposed new Federal postoffice building in Menasha, was launched. The appropriation allows $120,000 for the building and site and under the present contract, the structure will be completed for $90,000. Opinion was divided on the matter of attempting to use the balance of the appropriation by utilizing better materials in the building's construction or adding to its decoration.

A suggestion that the Kiwanis club take steps to secure better knowledge of problems facing city officials was made by E. G. Sonnenberg.

JUDGE KNOWS HIS OATS, FARMER IS PUT ON PROBATION

Chicago—(AP)—It may be said that Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley knows his oats. And because the doc, Frank Reed, 64-year-old farmer of near Joliet, Ill., was freed of a 60-day sentence for alleged violation of the prohibition law.

How did you happen to get into this," the court asked the defendant.

"I didn't have any money and was in debt," Reed replied. "I sowed 155 acres of my 160 acre farm in oats, but the crop was poor. A man came along and offered to rent my barn for $100. I only got the first payment because of the raid."

"What did you get for the oats you did harvest?" asked the judge.

"Thirteen cents a bushel."

"I only got 11 cents for mine," the judge said, "and it cost me 15 cents a bushel to raise the crop. People in the city don't have any idea of the way conditions have hit the farmer. I can't send this man to jail. Sixty days' probation."

SERVE NOTICE OF ELECTION NEXT APRIL 5

Secretary of State Invites First Flood of Nomination Papers

Madison—(AP)—Already piled up with the preliminary work of this heavy election year the secretary of state's office has officially invited the first flood of nomination papers by serving notice that there is to be a presidential primary, a delegate election, a judicial election and a referendum on the Sunday blue laws April 5.

Nominations will be open after Thursday for judgeships throughout the state, including one in the supreme court, for 27 delegates to the Republican National Convention, 26 to the Democratic convention and 24 each to the Prohibition party and Socialist conventions.

All nomination papers must be in the hands of the secretary of state by March 4.

The seat on the supreme court bench which is to be filled again this year is now occupied by Justice Oscar M. Fritz of Madison, who was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Justice Christian Doerflinger.

One outstanding contest in the judicial campaigns will be that involving Circuit Judge A. G. Zimmerman, of Dane county, who upset the original 1931 oleomargarine tax law. He ruled the meat of the law—that portion pertaining to the taxing of oleo retailers—to be unconstitutional on the ground that it levied prohibitory rates.

While the special session of the legislature changed the act to get away from a sliding schedule of taxes imposed on retailers according to the amount of oleo sold, and fixed a flat six cents-a-pound tax on the product, Judge Zimmerman is still being attacked by Wisconsin's anti-oleo element.

He recently charged that politicians made a "goat" of him by putting through an unconstitutional

SEE REDUCTION IN REDISCOUNT RATE OF BANKS

Action Is Considered Next Logical Step in Easing of Credit

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
(Copyright, 1932, by Cons. Press)
Wall Street, New York.—(CRA)—The next logical step in the program of easing credit and of financing the tremendous requirements of the government in March is a reduction in the rediscount rate of the federal reserve banks. This has been under consideration for some time and would have been made earlier had it not been for the resumption of gold exports to France. It may be hastened by the drop last week in the rate of the bank of England.

Since the middle of last October the rediscount rate of the New York bank has been 3 1/2 per cent. With the cut in January by the banks in Richmond and in Dallas this rate has become a sort of term index to the system. The feeling exists in federal reserve circles that changes in order to be effective should be at least 1 per cent, so the next move downward is likely to be from 3 1/2 per cent to 2 1/2 per cent, or back to the figure prevailing months ago. The next decision day on rates is Thursday of this week.

Government Must Borrow

It is recognized that the government must have to come into the market as a large borrower to meet its requirements on March 15. With revenues decreasing, and even under the proposed higher schedules for income taxes, a substantial deficit is probable. From present indications the treasury will again resort to moderate short term issues to cover its commitments. It is now the expectation that the plan adopted last year of offering certificates with varying maturities between six months and one year will be repeated. A figure as high as $1,000,000,000 has been placed on the amount to be made available to subscribers. It is obvious that the success of an issue of this size will depend considerably on the condition of the market when it is announced. Therefore, a lowering of the federal reserve rediscount rate prior to the offering will be an important factor in establishing a satisfactory coverage.

Earlier in the year the federal reserve bank in New York lowered its bill buying rate. It was at this time that rumors of a reduction in the rediscount rate were most frequent and evidence of an approaching change in the rediscount policy most circumstantial. It was then that the discussion of the federal reserve policy of "moderate inflation," in order to overcome the effects of over two years of deflation, began to develop.

Later the activities of the banking authorities in the purchase of paper waned. For the past month there has been a condition of status quo in the bill market. In less than two months the portfolio of the federal reserve has decreased from $227,000,000 to $149,000,000. Indications now are that a change in the conditions underlying the bill market are pending.

Inasmuch as the government has practically abandoned the idea of introducing a long term bond for public subscription into the market, and this includes its negative attitude toward the proposal for a sale of Reconstruction Corporation debentures, it is apparent that the March 15 issue of certificates will once more be absorbed by the government and by corporations in funds as well as by wealthy individuals. Maturing obligations next month, including $823,381,500 of 2 per cent certificates, will be replaced by new issues. The total government holdings of bonds on the date of the next call at the end of March are likely to show a higher total than on Dec. 31.

It is understood that a part of the buoyancy in long term government bonds during the past few weeks has been due to their repurchase by institutions that sold them out in the latter part of 1931. The smaller amounts for cash, as fear among bank depositors has been allayed, has led to a general institutional demand for government securities. At the same time, banks throughout the country report a considerable loss of deposits from those who have been attracted to government issues, both by their security and from the fact that they are yielding a higher rate of return than that available at the present average rate allowed by commercial banks on their thrift accounts.

HUBER OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR PROGRESSIVES

Urges Wisconsin Voters to Turn from "Shielders of Power Trust"

Sheboygan.—(AP)—Firing the opening salvo in the Republican convention delegate race, Lieut. Governor Henry A. Huber asked Wisconsin voters in a speech here tonight to send to Chicago in June a Progressive delegation which will direct its opposition "against those who would shield the power trust from regulation and the apostles of wealth from taxation."

Without mentioning any names he struck directly at the Hoover administration, which the Conservative Republican delegate candidates are expected to support, and summed up with this:

"Wisconsin will again in this national primary campaign marshal her protesting forces under another great Progressive leader—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska."

Directing his remarks to the Progressive campaign manager for the LaFollette delegate slate defined in a general way the issues that will be raised against President Hoover in the Progressive platform to be drawn up later.

Wisconsin will elect 27 delegates to the convention at the April 5 presidential primary, 20 from the congressional districts and seven at large, with two complete lists of Conservatives and Progressives from which to choose. Senators Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., and John J. Blaine head the Progressive slate.

His Promises

"For four years political leaders have promised the starving and unemployed of this nation that prosperity awaits around the corner," Huber said. "Now the discovery is made that the corner they pointed to is round. It has no apex. The common people understand the cause of this depression even if the politician leaders do not. It is a simple observation. The apostles of wealth have cornered the money of the world."

The lieutenant governor said that today's "misery" is attributable to an increase in the number of millionaires from 23 to 509 between 1920 and 1929.

He charged that billions loaned in Europe and South America have built up competition that put more American laboring men out of work than the Wisconsin dairy industry is facing ruin because of the lack of purchasing power; and that when Progressive members of Congress proposed national relief be extended "the apostles of wealth order their legislative tools to defeat the proposal."

"The voice of protest is a power for great good in this nation," the speaker said. "The feeble voice of protest, through abolition societies, sent an unknown country lawyer to the presidential chair to strike off the shackles of slavery. A voice of protest against economic servitude sent the late Robert M. LaFollette to the senate."

18 Measures Approved

"The historian has recorded that between 1910 and 1922 at least 18 basic economic measures proposed by the voice of Wisconsin were voted down in national convention only to be approved by the people and written into law. . . . That's what protesting does when it is done with Wisconsin's courage!"

"When Senator LaFollette made the fight for direct election of United States senators, for the taxation of war profits, for a federal inheritance tax, for the publicity of campaign expenses, for the regulation of the hours of labor, the political bosses snorted and sneered. They branded our leader as a 'dreamer' and a 'socialist,' but the insistent demands of a people turned the ears of the scions of Midway into the accomplishments of a Nazarene."

"Wisconsin lifts her voice of protest in this campaign, just as she did about the Teapot Dome scandal"

WANT U. S. TO ELIMINATE 2 MILITARY UNITS

Private Shipping Lines Want Transport Service of Army, Navy Halted

Copyright, 1932, by Cons. Press
Washington.—A determined move is being made in the appropriations committee of the house to eliminate the army and navy transport services and have these two military branches give their transportation to American ship lines which are suffering acutely from lack of business.

This objective would be achieved by cutting off appropriations in the army and the navy appropriation bills for the operation of these services in times of peace. The move is being sponsored by shipping interests fighting for a living after buying lines and vessels from the United States Shipping board. It is asserted that the government is in direct competition with the privately owned merchant marine which it attempted to set up and that the services operated by the army and the navy are extravagantly run for the benefit of the officer personnel. The Panama Steamship Line, operated by the Panama railroad, is also subject to attack.

Leads Fight

The fight against the government transport services is being led by James E. Barnes as the representative of shipbuilding companies and the privately operated merchant marine. He has furnished a vast amount of data to the committee and to Representative Will H. Wood of Indiana, ranking Republican member of the committee and for many years its chairman. Mr. Wood believes that economy, efficiency and justice demand that these government transport units be closed down and necessary transportation turned over to government-fostered private lines.

The war and navy departments are fight valiently for their respective services and there is support from patriotic sources who believe the maintenance of a transport service is necessary for the training of personnel for possible war service. Opponents counter with the statement that when the United States entered the World war the army and navy had nine transports, only one of them went to Europe, they say.

Representative Wood said hundreds of ships purchased from the government are tied up in their docks for lack of business, while army and navy transport lines ply their routes at below cost rates and passers junketing at the expense of the government's Panama line, operating out of New York, carried 163,000 tons of freight last year, 102,000 tons of this amount being strictly private freight.

"Meanwhile nearly 400 privately owned American ships lie rotting in port without passengers and without freight," said Mr. Wood. "These ships totaled 1,635,000 tons on Jan. 1. Fifty-five of them are tied up on the Pacific coast and the rest along the Atlantic seaboard. In addition to this sorry collection of idle hulks the United States Shipping board has 227 ships out of use with a total tonnage of 1,000,000."

"Under the present system of operating the Panama Railroad Steamship co., the great Mississippi valley is practically barred from doing business with the Panama Canal commission. The army transport service is only operated out of the ports of New York and San Francisco and in order to identify their operation they ship troops and supplies going to Panama canal or other areas from San Antonio, New Orleans, Atlanta, St. Louis, Columbus, Chicago, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Portland, Me., to New York."

The records show that most of their troops on the east coast come from San Antonio and Fort Benning, Ga. On the west coast they ship from St. Paul to Seattle, then to San Francisco and from El Paso to Los Angeles, and then to San Francisco in order to lead a transport. The records on the west coast show that two-thirds of their cargo originates in the vicinity of Seattle, Portland and San Francisco.

Resolutions condemning the military transport services have been passed by the Mississippi Valley association, the Mid-West Foreign trade association, the National Rivers and Harbors congress and the San Francisco, Seattle and numerous other chambers of commerce. They condemn government transport services because they say they

THE LADY AND THE PLAY

Those who have read my writings on Contract Bridge know that I have frequently stated that the average woman Bridge player plays better than her husband. This is not only true as to the average, but in many cases women qualify in the expert class. The hand below gave an opportunity for a lady in Ann Arbor, Michigan, to disclose her ability to correctly execute that extremely rare play, the Grand Coup. The hand and bidding was:

It might be remarked in passing that perhaps the bidding disclosed the weakness of the sex in succumbing to the lure of diamonds when there was a safe game in spades and particularly is this true in view of the fact that had East not been in such a hurry to cash the two Aces, the contract could have been defeated. However, human nature is human nature and I myself with less reason have found the car with such a diamond suit impossible to resist.

As the hand was played, the Ace of clubs was first led and then the Ace of hearts, East then continued the club suit and North won with the King and laid down the Ace of diamonds, only to receive the unpleasant news that all five adverse

EAT DOUBLE, RIP OFF FAT

10 Pounds in 10 Days!

An Italian Discovery

Drink Water Before Breakfast and Make One Change in Diet Only to Rip Off Ten Pounds in 10 Days

HERE is sweet music, in scientific tempo, for fat people's ears. "Eat more to grow thin."

Thanks to a unique Italian discovery, thousands of people are doing it. Losing as much as seven pounds a week, and building their health as well.

Here's the way. So if you want to get rid of some bulk, cut this article out and save it. Chances are, in a week, your friends will be wondering what you've been doing to yourself to get rid of the fat they used to tease you about.

What You Do

FIRST: As soon as you get up in the morning, eat two tablespoonsful of sparkling Brioschi Italian effervescent in half a glass of cool water; and drink it down while it is still effervescent. This tends to de-acidify the system before food touches the stomach.

NEXT: Make just one simple change in your diet. Eat DOUBLE the quantity you now eat of certain foods; and cut down on others. Here are the foods to double on; the ones to cut down on.

DOUBLE on these: Carrots, spinach, oranges, cabbage, lettuce, new turnips, white squash, sauerkraut, broccoli, fresh peas, apples, and all green vegetables. See how much of these you can make your stomach hold. Eat also your usual appetite's requirement of any lean meat. Beef, veal, chicken, etc.

Cut on these: Eat bran or whole wheat bread instead of white bread or biscuits. For dessert have fresh fruit instead of pastry. Cut down on butter but don't cut it out entirely.

BEFORE BED: Repeat two table-spoonfuls of sparkling Brioschi Italian effervescent in half a glass of water to again de-acidify the stomach. Don't think, either, that this is hard. It makes a really pleasant drink that tastes like lemonade, not like vile-tasting salts. So everything is easy.

The result of this dietary change will be that you'll really have MORE than you want to eat. Yet you'll see fat go in a way you wouldn't have believed. And you'll feel more active than you probably have for years. For the diet that takes off the fat, cut this article out and save it. The de-acidifier you use is called Brioschi Italian effervescent (pronounced Bree-oh-sky). You can get it at any drugstore.

Oneida Treaty Frees Land From Taxes, Lawyer Finds

Special to Post-Crescent
Oneida—W. J. Kershaw, Milwaukee, an attorney who has been retained by the Oneida Indians as their counsel and with whom Attorney General J. W. Reynolds will confer on the Oneida claim against the federal government, spoke to about 200 Oneidas at the parish hall on the progress he had made with their claim.

He said by the terms of the treaty of 1838, the Oneida land is forever free of taxes imposed by any state or territory. Quoting a clause in the treaty he read: "The land secured to them by patents under the treaty shall never be included in any state or territory of this union." This land was given them under this condition because of the help rendered the colonies during the revolution and is the only treaty with such a clause.

Attorney Kershaw gives the opinion that the Oneidas do not have to pay taxes. This involves about 130,540 acres in Brown and Outagamie counties.

OUTLINE PROGRAM TO MEET EMERGENCY PASTURE SITUATION

Agronomy Department Tells Farmers What to Plant to Provide for Cattle

BY W. F. WINSEY
County agents cooperating with the agronomy department of the college of agriculture are recommending the use of unfertilized June grass pastures from the middle of May to the middle of July and for a short time after the fall rains set in; fertilized June grass pastures from May 1 to Aug. 1 and through September and October; rye pasture through May and October; sweet clover through May, June, July and a part of August; and Sudan through July, August and September.

June grass pastures are most always pastured too early in the spring, says the recommendations. As a result the productivity of the pastures is reduced and their usefulness in summer is impaired.

Rye, seeded in growing corn at the rate of one and one-half to two bushels per acre, or drilled in grain or corn stubble will produce late pasture in the fall or early pasture in the spring. Rye pastured in the spring will give the June grass a chance to get a good start before pasturing. Shifting cattle from one part of a June grass pasture field to another is a practice that increases the yield of the pastures.

Sudan grass pasture is best suited to fertile soils, says the pasture recommendations. Seeded on a well prepared seed bed from 80 to 35 pounds of seed per acre, the exact amount depending upon the richness of the soil and the germination of the seed. The seeding should be done when the weather is warm in June.

Sweet clover seeded without a nurse crop about the middle of April will produce a heavy growth by Aug. 1, for fall pasture. If not pastured too close it will be ready for service the following spring. Seeded without nurse crop in the spring, sweet clover produces large yields of excellent quality hay.

One and one-half bushels of oats with alfalfa or sweet clover planted early may be pastured when the grain is about ten inches tall. As the grain is grazed the alfalfa or sweet clover grows rapidly and is soon ready for pasture. Some county agents are of the opinion that it is more profitable to pasture a crop of oats than to let it go to seed. They point to the fact that it costs 50 cents to raise a bushel of oats and that the market price is about 25 cents. At the latter prices 60 bushels of oats, the product of an acre has a value of $15. Two and one-half tons of good oat hay from an acre would have a feeding value of double that price as it doubles the yield of timothy hay.

HEAVING OF ICE CAUSES RECORDING OF "QUAKE"

Madison—(AP)—A seismograph at the University of Wisconsin last week recorded a quake in the immediate vicinity.
It had several members of the geology department puzzled until it was discovered that the expansion of ice in nearby Lake Mendota caused the recording on the instrument.

Carey's Own Make Ice Cream, 22 test cream and fresh eggs—Carey's Buttered Barbeque.

Expansion of the ice caused a ridge, which reached a height of six feet in places, from Picnic Point to Maple Bluff.

Associated Press

THE RANGE IS IMPORTANT but ACCURACY is Fundamental

Great organizations of men and machines are coordinated in the firing of naval guns. Science is always seeking improved, more powerful explosives to hurl the giant shells farther and farther. But all this is wasted unless the gunner's aim is ACCURATE.

There is a direct parallel in reporting the news of the world. Colorful descriptions, dramatic writing and speedy transmission are useless unless the subject matter is ACCURATE.

The Associated Press maintains a worldwide organization so that news events, wherever they may occur, will be reported ACCURATELY through direct observation and reliable sources by a staff interested only in verified FACTS.

"AP" dispatches are dependable.

URGE BUYERS TO INSPECT LABELS

Federal Expert Says Information Given on Wrapping Is Valuable

Some states are known for distinctive packs of canned sweet corn, says V. R. Bonney, of the Federal Food and Drug Administration in a bulletin to Gus Sell county agent. Maine "style" sweet corn is prepared by crushing the grains to a creamy consistency. Such corn, packed outside Maine, is called "creamstyle corn." "Maryland style" corn is prepared by cutting the kernels from the cob so as to leave them substantially whole. Such corn packed outside Maryland is called "whole grain" or "whole kernel."

Certain varieties of sweet corn make such excellent packs that canners use the variety name on the label. Some of the most popular of these varieties are Country Gentleman, Golden Bantam, Golden Giant, Improved Golden Bantam, Bantam Evergreen, and Charletois.

Some pickers print on their labels the official grades established by the United States Department of Agriculture. Grade A (popularly known as Fancy) is the best quality, very young, tender corn of bright color, with superior flavor, and practically free from defects. Grade B (freely called Extra Standard) possesses the desirable characteristics of color, tenderness, flavor and freedom from defects to a lesser, but reasonable degree. Grade C (Standard, so called) is corn in which the color may be dull, the flavor only fair, the kernels rather "doughy," and the presence of husk, cob, or silk distinctly noticeable. Off grade (or Substandard) of course, is still lower in desirability.

"Field or 'horse' corn is sometimes canned," says Bonney. "Since field corn does not have the superior eating qualities of sweet corn, the pure food law requires that the label plainly declare the product to be field corn when such is the case. If starch is added to creamstyle corn, it must be declared. Starch is never used in large quantities, however."

CHURCH SPONSORS MOVIE

Kaukauna—A movie entitled "Rin Rago" was presented before a large crowd in the basement of Holy Cross church here Tuesday evening. Proceeds will be given to foreign missionaries. Tickets for the movie were sold by pupils of the grade school.

SELL COMPILING LIST OF HOME GROWN SEEDS

Lists of home grown seeds which Outagamie-co farmers have available for sale, are being compiled by Gus Sell, county agent, through cooperation of the rural schools of the county. Through the rural students Mr. Sell has distributed blanks on which farmers may list the seed they have for sale. These are then returned to Mr. Sell. When all the lists are in they will be compiled and again distributed through the schools to the farmers of the county and also to seed dealers. Already seed lists have been turned in by 32 schools, Mr. Sell said, but a great many more are expected.

SHOCKED STAYD CITY

Boston—Peter Prondo went to a friend's apartment room for a party. While there he took off his clothes to take a nap. His friend failed to show up after a time and Peter thought he had better go look him up. He ventured outside the door of the room and the wind blew the door shut, locking it. Clad only in his underwear, Peter started looking for his friend. He paraded the streets followed by a curious throng, until a cop found him.

Fire insurance policies underwritten in the United States in 1931 totaled $201,000,000,000.

BOY CRAZY

by GRACE PERKINS

SYNOPSIS: While Hope Ross gazed about, her bright blue eyes lighted on the breakfast tray set in the sunshine so that the painted cherries and peaches and grapes stood out on the gay yellow china like living fruit. Her nose crinkled and her small bare foot tapped thoughtfully. A particularly rasping meow from Sassy made up her mind.

Kitten in her lap, Hope sat down and fed it cream and bits of parsley from her omelette. Disdainfully she tasted her orange juice, and wondered why a single taste should drain the glass. Merely for curiosity's sake she lifted the cover from one dish and closed her eyes faintly at the sight of hot bean muffins, and two pats of fresh sweet butter. The tang of coffee teased her.

She and Sassy scraped the tray clean between them, and once more Hope lifted tray and dishes and flung them out her window into the back brook below, on the theory that nobody could really tell whether or not she had eaten anything.

Slowly and thoughtfully she dressed. Quite carefully she explained the dire necessity of peculiar proceedings to Sassy, begging the cat not to worry and to please put up with a few hardships just for an hour or so.

Then with infinite patience, she knotted together her sheets, and vigorously pushed her bed over to the window, fastened one end of her rope to the bedpost. The long end she tossed out the window.

Next Sassy was tenderly packed in a tiny overnight bag, padded with boudoir pillows to protect her pedicreed bones.

Out the window, flung as far as possible, so that it might miss the brook. Went her own full sized valise. Next, with prayers and mumbling pleas, the overnight bag containing Sassy.

Then with urgent speed, Hope climbed upon her bed and began to edge over to the window, grasping the sheet mightily, and testing its strength.

No doubt the servants had reported the various accumulations of cast outs on her window. At any rate, before Hope had one foot out on her perilous journey, she heard her bedroom door was suddenly unlocked and Papa Ross entered.

"Hope! Come in out of there, at once!"

"Pale but sharp eyed, Hope stared at him.

"Not unless you're going to act human!" she called back sharply.

"Come in here at once. I say."

"I'm going to the toilet!"

"There's no Dickie to go to! Come in here!"

Hope jumped to the floor, gasping.

"What do you mean--there's no Dickie?"

"Come down here, and I'll tell you I want to talk to you, Hope."

She glanced furtively toward the window.

"But my litty--it will die--"

"The cook has your cat. Come here, I say, child. I have news for you. Bad news, I suppose, but I expect you to be thoroughbred enough--"

"Has anything happened to Dickie?"

"Only the sternest sense of duty, only the deepest faith in his sense of right, prevented Papa Ross from melting at that wail.

"No. Nothing has happened," he said slowly. "Except that he's come to his senses, I suppose."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't know anything about him," Papa Ross shrugged, and wondered why he could not meet the child's eyes. "He hasn't been near me since he brought you home yesterday, and lost his temper to such an extent that he threw up against the door and very nearly broke my arm."

When Hope refuses to believe him, Mr. Ross produces proof. Hope investigates on Monday.

CROTCH OF YOUTH

Buffalo, N. Y.--Crotch, that new medical find extracted from the adrenal glands of cattle, is being hailed as a gloom chaser by Frank A. Hartman, of the University of Buffalo. He says it will increase the vitality of a sick person 28 times, imbue healthy persons with sharper wits, relieve fatigue and make people happy.

Kimberly Quint Beats Hortonville In Little Nine Play-Off

RED DEVILS USE SHORT SHOTS TO COP 24 AND 18

Papermakers Now Will Clash With Reedsville for League Title

Kimberly—Coach Harper's Red Devils proved that they were the cream of the western division in the Little Nine conference by handing Coach Morgan's Polar Bears of Hortonville a stinging beating by a 24 to 18 count on the Neenah high school court Tuesday evening.

The game featured two kinds of offenses. The Polar Bears are one of the best long shooting aggregations seen around here for a number of years. But "old man long shot" was taught a pretty lesson when the smooth working, short passing combination of the Papermakers brought the ball under the hoop to score pot shots which led to victory.

The game started fast and for the first three minutes the ball moved from one end of the floor to the other without hitting the hoop. Kimberly counted when Williams and Montie each made gift shots. Servis of the Polar Bears then let go one of his long-heaves from mid floor to tie the count.

Williams of the Red Devils, on a guard play, dropped in a bucket from the side and then made a gift shot count. Servis again dropped in a long toss and the score gave Kimberly a 5-4 lead at first quarter. Servis gave the Polar Bears the lead for a minute when he again sank a long arching bucket.

Montie made his gift shot good. Williams and Hopkins dropped buckets to give Kimberly a slight lead in the second half. Diestler and Heltzerhoff dropped in field goals to again tie the count. Each team advanced a point on free throws by Williams and Heltzerhoff. Montie scored from scrimmage to give Kimberly the lead at the close of the half 13-11.

Hortonville counted a point on Diestler's free shot and Alberts dribbled under the hoop and sank his shot. Vander Velden, his team mate, dropped one from side and Alberts concluded the Papermakers' spurt with a free throw.

Then the Polar Bears came to life with three buckets by Diestler, Heltzerhoff and Buechner. Hopkins added two points for Kimberly on his bucket, just as the third period ended. In the last period Williams of the Papermakers rang up a bucket and a gift shot, Gossens a team mate added two gift shots, while the Polar Bears failed to count.

In a preliminary game the Kimberly "B" squad walloped the Hortonville "B" team by a 15-5 count. Kimberly, representing the western division now will go to Reedsville to battle it out for the league championship Friday evening.

Iowa City —(P)—The possibility of James Crowley of Michigan State becoming head football coach at the University of Iowa was brighter today.

Crowley announced at East Lansing, Mich., last night that he had conferred with Dr. E. H. Leuder, University of Iowa athletic director, and another member of the athletic board, in Chicago and had been told he is the man desired for the position left vacant by the resignation of Coach Burton A. Ingwersen.

He refused to discuss terms of the contract offered him but it is understood the Iowa representative tendered a substantial salary increase.

He declared he would give his answer "in a couple of days."

Dazzy Vance Willing To Take 25 Per Cent Cut; White Sox Off To Texas

LEARWATER, Fla. —(P)—Dazzy Vance, right handed pitching ace of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is willing to take a 25 per cent cut in salary but not more.

"As far as I can see," Dazzy says, "the club officials are trying to put me in a false position. They wish to create the impression that I will not sign except for an exorbitant salary and then they will be free to trade me without any resentment on the part of the public. I simply will not take a 50 per cent cut. I still am willing to meet them halfway and accept a 25 per cent reduction."

McGraw Seeks Title

Los Angeles —(P)—John McGraw is in town only a few minutes before he starts talking about the 1932 New York Giants.

"The Cardinals are the team to beat," he said, "but the Cubs will be tough. I think we should have a good team. If Critz's arm is all right he'll be the second baseman. If not, I'll work Lindstrom at second. If this Koenekke we got from Indianapolis is as good as I think he is he'll play left field."

Mack Troubled

Fort Myers, Fla. —(P)—The pitching staff was the big "X" of Connie Mack's baseball algebra today.

Speculation over Waite Hoyt's chances of rejoining the Athletics mingled with conjectures as to the outcome of the demands for more money made by Lefty Grove and Rube Walberg.

Hoyt drove down from St. Petersburg, the Yankees' training base, clouted a couple of baseballs into the palmists back of Tompkins park, held a conference with Connie and then drove off again.

Grove and Walberg continued to play golf today.

Bloom, Miss. —(P)—With no casualties in the opening days of practice, the ball playing senators from Washington begin to look pretty good to Manager Walter Johnson.

Trimmer waist lines particularly have provided surprises by some of the boys on the pitching staff who in former seasons were sources of worry in this respect.

From this same division, however, worry for President Clark Griffith persisted today with Bobby Burke maintaining his self-assumed status of "hold out." The news has trickled down from headquarters, however, that the recalcitrant pitcher has had his last offer. Prospects of just the opposite to the demoralized salary boost are in store for Bobby if he does not put in an appearance soon. He was ordered to report day before yesterday.

Chicago. —(P)—Headed by a new president and a new manager, the Chicago White Sox left today for Mineral Wells, Tex., the first stop on the training schedule.

The new president of the club is J. Louis Comiskey, who succeeded to the position after the death of his father, Charles A. Comiskey, the "old Roman" of baseball.

The younger Comiskey has obtained new talent by trade and purchase and is just as determined as his father was to bring another American league championship to Chicago.

The new manager is Lew Fouke, who came to the Sox in 1930, in a trade which sent Willie Kamm to Cleveland. He played in the infield and outfield last season, and after Dazzy Vance gave up the job of trying to win with the club, was appointed manager.

The training season will be divided into two parts. The first, at Mineral Wells, will be for the purpose of getting into condition, and the actual business of sizing up new men and playing baseball will be undertaken at San Antonio, Tex.

"Little Poison" Signs

Ada, Okla. —(P)—His contract signed, Lloyd "Little Poison" Waner left his winter home here last night for the Pittsburgh Pirate training camp at Paso Robles, Calif. He said his contract terms were satisfactory.

Bradenton, Fla. —(P)—"Dizzy" Dean says he's not going to try hard this year to live up to his nickname. Although he is as talkative as ever since joining the Cardinals' battery forces for spring training, Dean says he's going to take the game more seriously this season.

With the arrival of Dean, big Jess Haines, "Tex" Carleton and Leo Dixon, and the signing up of Phil Rizzuto, the Cardinals' lineup has "hadn't quite made up" his mind. Manager Garry Street, and on hand most of the 1932 standbys for spring training.

Sports Question Box

Q.—Is Newsboy Brown a native son and what is his rating as a flyweight?

A.—Newsboy Brown was born in New York City and his right name is Dave Montrose. He was a corking good flyweight but has taken on weight and is considered a logical contender for the bantamweight title. He holds a decision over the champion, Al Brown, in an over-the-weight contest.

Q.—There is a player on our team who steps across home plate every now and then or outside of the batter's box but he does not hit the ball? What is the penalty for doing that?

A.—There is no penalty if the ball is not batted.

Q.—Would you advise road runs for an amateur boxer?

A.—No. Hard work on the road is too fatiguing for the amateur. Long walks and short, sharp sprints are more beneficial.

Q.—Was President Harbridge of the American League ever a ball player?

A.—No.

WOLVERINES LOSE TO PETTS; S. O. S. WIN FROM BETAS

Valley Sports Too Small and They Lose to A. I. R., 14 and 9

WOLVERINES cagers in the Older Boys League at the Y. M. C. A. took a trimming last night from the Petts in a contest that went anyway except the way it was doped. The score was 13 and 9.

The Petts got off to an impressive start with four buckets and a couple free throws and held a 10 and 2 advantage at the half. The Wolves held the edge in the second half play getting six points compared to three for the Petts but the first half margin gave the Petts an easy win.

Specials Lucky

Sammy Ornsteln's Specials had a lot of luck in eking out a win over the Beta Hi-Y team by a score of 13 and 12. Outplayed by the Betas throughout most of the game, the Specials trailed 8 and 3 at the half. In the second half Arnold connected with the hoop for six points and the team managed to pull ahead by a point at the final whistle.

Valley Sports were a little too small for the A. I. R. team and took a trimming in the third game. The score was 14 and 9. During the first half the A. I. R. counted four buckets compared to two for the Sports. The score at the end of the half was 8 and 4 for the A. I. R. In the second half the winners counted three buckets and the Sports collected five points.

YANKEES PURCHASE 4TH WINOR CLUB

Latest Addition Is Springfield Club of the Eastern League

New York —(P)—In their campaign for a "farm system" to rival that maintained by the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, the New York Yankees have taken over the Springfield club of the Eastern League.

The Yankees now own outright or have an interest in four minor league outfits of varying classification. With their farm system grown to this extent, they may elect to hold off on any further dealings with the minors until they see how their scheme is going to operate.

Heading the Yankees' minor league holdings is the class double-A Newark club of the International league, Springfield, purchase of which was announced last night, is a class A team. These are the only clubs the Yankees own outright but they have interests in the class B Scranton team of the New York Pennsylvania league as well as a "club" of the Middle-Atlantic circuit, a class C organization.

Headed by Arthur J. Shean of Springfield and George M. Welas, recently appointed "farm manager" by the Yankees.

H. Eugene McCann, former manager of the Springfield club and a later scout with the Yankees, has been named president of the club which will operate the club with Welas serving as vice-president. A manager is to be named within a few days.

Shean had operated the team for the last 13 years.

Villagers Use Green Bay Talent and Come Through With Win

Special to Post-Crescent

Kimberly—The little town of New Franken using might good Green Bay talent turned the trick on the Kimberly Clubbers Monday at New Franken by a 24-19 score.

The home team had a man sticking on the clubbers' ace in the hole, Gossens, like glue and the star was held to four field goals.

New Franken held a 4-2 lead at quarter. Then with a big spurt in the second period made the score 12-2 at the half. In the second half Papermakers tried hard to come back but were unable to overcome that disastrous second period.

FRIDAY'S SCHEDULE
De Pere at Oconto Falls.
Menasha at Neenah.
Kaukauna at Two Rivers.
Shawano at New London.

DE PERE—Winning their last matches by the narrowest of margins, the De Pere Red-Rockets and the Neenah Rockets retained their lead in the Northwestern Wisconsin conference, but they will not forget how close they came to being shunted into the class with the other 12 defeated teams.

De Pere posed out a victory over Two Rivers by one point, on a 24-23 score, and Neenah rallied in the last few minutes of action to beat Kaukauna by two points, on a 19-17 score.

Both teams, in the stretch battle for the title, are sure of remaining ahead of the other quintets, and they may finish with a clean slate, although they encounter strong opponents in their two remaining games. The Red-Rockets must win from Oconto Falls next Friday and Kaukauna the following Friday, while the Rockets must defeat Menasha and Oconto in succession to finish the schedule with an unblemished record for the season.

De Pere Meets Oconto

De Pere's game with Oconto Falls on Friday comes at a time when the Falls cagers are joyful over their latest feat of beating Shawano, 14 to 9. Players of both teams are primed for the battle, which Oconto Falls' players know means so much to De Pere.

Neenah may win easily from Menasha this week, as Menasha has lost five games while winning only one, but the following weekend the Rockets will go against a scrappy, fast team from Oconto. De Pere's closing match will be played against Kaukauna here March 4.

Kaukauna's defeat dropped that team from third to sixth place, and allowed the Oconto and West De Pere teams, which were idle, and the Oconto Falls team to pass them in the team standings. West De Pere and Oconto moved into a third place tie, and Oconto Falls jumped from seventh to fifth position.

SEE HOOVER'S RENOMINATION AS CERTAINTY

Quiet Campaign for Months Has Not Been Noticed Generally

BY BYRON PRICE

Washington—Because it is all being done so quietly you'd scarcely guess that a campaign is in progress to elect a republican nominee for the presidency.

The current of Democratic activity has become a roaring rapids, its surface littered with rivalries and dissensions. The Republican waters run still, but deep.

Long ago the friends of President Hoover realized there might be a formidable effort to deprive him of that second nomination which tradition says is the right of every occupant of the White House.

Times were bad. Politics were bad. Republican prestige had lost heavily at the off-year elections. At one end of the party the insurgents were insuring with more than ordinary zest. At the other end a "draft Coolidge" campaign was spreading out noiselessly among some of the stalwarts.

The friends of the president took steps. They took them quietly. But they were so effective that months ago his renomination became a foregone conclusion.

No Serious Scares

Of course the Coolidge renunciation last fall was the bitterest medicine of all for those who hoped Hoover would be beaten. The Sage of Northampton sounded a call to "stand by the President" in such clear tones that it echoed through the whole Republican corridor.

One or two scares have reached the alter ears of the administration watchers since then, but none has been taken very seriously.

A half dozen independents, including Senators William E. Borah and Hiram Johnson, have let it seep out that they might be induced to run. The many conferences of this group appear to have come to nothing at all so far as the gathering together of anti-Hoover delegates is concerned.

Col. Horace Mann, the Hoover campaign manager in 1928, has been busy for weeks trying to build up a stop-Hoover organization, chiefly in the south. Mann's own state of Tennessee is one of several whose central committees recently have gone on record for Hoover.

A "Draft Dawes" program was proposed by certain senators. The President's confidants were certain General Dawes himself would put the quietus to that, as he did, completely.

Friends Active

But the friends of the President have taken nothing for granted. They still are taking steps, quietly.

Ray Benjamin, a San Francisco lawyer and personal friend of Mr. Hoover, who came to Washington a year ago and began talking with Republican politicians from far and wide, still is at work. Another Californian, Mark Requa, has been feeling the Republican pulse unceasingly, and reporting the result.

Recently Frank Hitchcock, a former chairman of the national committee, now a newspaper publisher in Arizona, has been staying in Washington, conferring with leaders and the White House.

Walter Newton, one of the President's secretaries, carries in his vest pocket a careful summary of what's doing in every state. So does Walter Brown, the postmaster general, who is slated to become party chairman after the convention.

These are only a few of the many.

Avoid Early Primaries

With the indicated support already far past the simple convention majority needed to renominate, it is easy to see why the President's name has been withheld from the early primaries, like those in North Dakota and Illinois.

Whenever an open primary fight is necessary to capture a state delegation it means the candidate must line up with one local faction or another. Many embarrassing complications have emerged from such alliances.

NAVY TAKES "ROLL" OUT OF CRUISERS WITH STEEL FINS

Plan to Replace Jerky Gyration With Slower, Steadier Motion

BY KIRKE SIMPSON

Washington—(AP)—Eccentric gyrations in a seaway of Uncle Sam's first "treaty" cruisers, the 10,000 ton, 8-in-guns, has set a new and unexpected problem for navy designers.

The ships, or some of them, roll in a beam sea in a jerky, disconcerting way. It is hard on everybody aboard. Still, the navy would not worry much about that. Its officers and men do not go to sea for pleasure.

That jarring roll, severe enough to have snapped a topmast overboard on one gale-beset cruiser, upsets gunnery calculations a bit.

Even that is not regarded as very serious by most navy officers, however. There are intimations that one of these very ships is set a world's record for target accuracy.

High Speed Is Aim

What does concern them is that the "sea-keeping qualities," as the navy puts it, of the ships is impaired. The strategic conception upon which they were planned and built calls for high speed for long distances, whatever the wind and sea. And the erratic roll they have disclosed might necessitate slowing them down under certain conditions.

Technically, the navy experts explain the jerky roll by pointing to the low center of gravity. A ship built for speed means a long, thin craft subject to roll anyhow.

To give these slender fighting greyhounds of the sea greater security in battle, the designers fixed the center of gravity unusually low. They made them "stiff" ships in a seaway; just a bit too stiff it is now.

Already the navy is at work to render them more kindly craft, given to slower, steadier motion.

The American cruisers run from 200 to 700 tons a ship under their allowed maximum of 10,000 "Washington tons" of displacement.

Were it not for this triumph in weight saving, no remedial measures to correct the rolling characteristics of the American 8-inch gunners could be undertaken without sanction of every other signatory of the Washington treaty, if any increase in weight was involved.

Plans To Check Roll

Immediate measures of correction involve extending the length and the width of the hull, known as bilge, and the rolling motion of the vessels are equipped. These are steel fins that project diagonally outward on the under-water bulge of the hull.

They act automatically to check the roll, one holding back against the water on the upthrust side as the other similarly checks the downthrust on the other.

Compensating ballast tanks also are to be tried, a system of valves and pipes passing water from one to the other automatically against the roll of the ship, helping to steady her.

But the real answer of the naval designers to the rolling problem is the use of a new type of hull, one in which the available tonnage margin to increase weight above the water line and raise the center of gravity.

How that will be done, whether by increasing protection against gun fire and air bombs or by additional offensive installation, has not been disclosed.

To protect uninfected peach trees, Georgia, during last year, killed about one million trees throughout the state to keep them from spreading the phony peach disease.
